LINDYS PLAN NEW APPEAL

Today

No News, Yet
The Lindberghs' Appeal
No Family Safe
A National Disgrace

—By Arthur Brisbane—

NO NEWS of the Lindbergh child when this was written.

Very wisely, Col. Lindbergh and his wife have signed a public statement in which they solemnly agree to pay the $50,000 ransom demanded and to divulge nothing in connection with the negotiations that might lead to the apprehension of the kidnapers.

"Our only hope is in his immediate and safe return. We pledge ourselves that we shall not try to injure in any way those connected with the return of the child."

This statement, signed "Charles and Anne Lindbergh," can be relied upon absolutely by those that took the child.

By returning the stolen baby now, they can get the money that they want, and relieve the suffering of the unhappy mother, and protected by Col. Lindbergh's promise to make no revelation whatever concerning them, and take no further steps in the effort to bring about their arrest and conviction.

If they ignore the opportunity that is offered to them now, they will be the objects of a man hunt that would continue, if necessary, for 20 years.

The secret service of the United States would join in that hunt. The criminals know that the U. S. secret service, in its dealings with counterfeiters and others, NEVER GIVES UP.

For their own safety, and in the name of human decency, the kidnapers are urged to communicate with Col. Lindbergh, either directly, or through anybody they may select, relying completely on the solemn pledges of the child's father and mother.

Any news except that concerning the stolen child is not news at all, now. The head of a great nation might die, any extraordinary event might occur, nothing cou'd take the public's attention, its tense, pitiful interest from the Lindbergh kidnaping.

That fact is a tribute to human nature, and the soundness of its intuitions.

The family is the foundation of society, all civilization is built upon it. And this most horribly outrageous invasion of the sanctity of the family makes every other conceivable happening seem unimportant.

LIFE, FAMILY, CHILDREN ARE NOT SAFE UNDER OUR GANGSTER RULE, FINANCED BY PROHIBITION.

The House ways and means committee indorses a sales tax of 2¼ per cent. This, it is to be hoped, does not mean interfering with the business of retail shops, or of business men generally. The right plan is to tax manufactures at the source, which would automatically increase prices by the amount of the tax.

Since the government cannot get the money that it MUST have, otherwise, this tax probably is necessary.

Nine billion dollars' worth of railroads, namely the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, may be merged in one great system. The Interstate Commerce Commission would have to give its consent. This it will do, if it has the intelligence of one full grown mosquito.

What this country needs is to save money, avoid waste in overhead and otherwise. The combination of these great railroads would mean the saving of hundreds of millions a year.

Russia, whose army is the most powerful in the world as regards numbers, and well equipped as regards machinery, and especially airplanes, is massing troops as near as possible to Japan.

The idea is to be ready for anything the Japanese may do. Japan, well informed by her secret service, will probably do nothing against Russia.

China seems enough to handle just now.

As predicted in this newspaper yesterday, the so-called truce between China and Japan has not stopped the fighting.

Yesterday's late news reported two new battles started. The League has said: "The fighting must stop." That doesn't mean anything.

If Soviet Russia puts her army close to Japan's new empire on the Manchurian border and says: "YOU MUST STOP FIGHTING," that will have some effect.

Our naval eggs are all going into one basket. Practically the entire United States navy is ordered to the Pacific ocean. Only submarines and minesweepers will be left in the Atlantic. If we SHOULD get into trouble with Asia, and if it SHOULD be proved that a few airships properly managed can sink any number of floating ships, something unpleasant might happen. But, of course, it won't.

FOUR MEN FLEE FLAMING BOAT

The burning boat was discovered by O. H. Reamy, keeper of Graves Light, who notified the coast guard life saving station at Point Allerton.

Through powerful glasses, Reamy saw the dory pull away from the burning craft but the men made little headway toward shore, he said. He placed the position three miles east of Harding's Ledge and more than two miles from Graves Light.

A coast guard crew in charge of Capt. G. A. Josephs launched a life boat equipped with motor to pick up the fishermen.

The men in the dory were later taken aboard the fisherman Santa Maria, headed for Boston.

GUSTIN FOE IN JAIL SLUGGED

The feud between the Gustin and Lombardi gangs, already stained with a double murder of Gustin men, broke out anew at the Charles st. jail yesterday, the Boston Evening American exclusively learned today.

Anthony ("Bozo") Cortese, three-gun member of the Lombardi faction, was slugged and beaten up—his jaw cracked, several teeth knocked out and his lower lip split.

Cortese is the man who on his own tearful plea was transferred from Deer Island to Charles St. jail late in January.

At that time he said Gustin gangsters had threatened to snuff out his life at the island institution.

The attack at the Charles st. jail, it was learned, took place while Cortese was on his way downstairs from his cell to the dining hall for breakfast.

Cortese was in a line of prisoners. He was crowded slugged on the jaw and in falling struck his head on the edge of a step.

The crowding of other prisoners close around Cortese as the assault occurred prevented jail guards at the foot of the stairs from seeing who did it or exactly what happened. As a result, no one has been punished.

POLICE 'BRAINS' SEE BABY SAFE

BULLETIN

Trenton, March 5—A report was current here at the meeting of crime experts today that a plan was being considered of appointing a national board of strategy to have general charge of the search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

Trenton, N. J., March 5—After conferring with police officials of 10 states and the federal government, Gov. A. Harry Moore announced today it was expected the kidnaped Lindbergh baby soon would be restored unharmed to its parents.

Gov. Moore said it was the general opinion of the assembled police officials, who came to the conference from as far away as Chicago, that the kidnaping was the work of amateurs and that they would soon realize their only chance of escape was to place the baby in some safe place and notify the authorities.

The governor's statement, issued some time after the conference was concluded, follows:

"It is the general opinion of those who have given the fullest consideration to the known facts in the kidnaping crime that it has been committed by amateurs and not by professional criminals.

Kidnaped Ohio Boy Is Found, 2 Men Seized

Youngstown, O., March 5—(AP)—Jas. De Jute, Jr., 12-year-old son of a Niles contractor, kidnaped near his home Wednesday morning, was returned safely to his parents today after officers had found him in a secret tunnel at an alleged gambling resort near Youngstown.

Mahoning County detectives, acting on a tip, stormed the place and found the lad being held by two men.

The men were seized and taken to Trumbull County jail in Warren. Police said they admitted the kidnaping and said they had taken the boy directly to the place where he was found.

The men were booked in the county jail in Warren as John De Marco, 30, and Dowell Hargraves, 27, both of Youngstown.

The unoccupied house where the boy was found is back from the Hubbard-Youngstown road, behind a barbecue and filling station. It is the place where Josephine Devine of Niles was held captive several days eight months ago, after her abduction from her place in Niles known as "The Red House," police said.

Detective W. J. Harrison, who led the raiders, declined to name the man who tipped him in a telephone call by saying: "Go to Scotty's place and you will find that De Jute kid from Niles."

The raiders surrounded the house kicked in the door, and rushed into a room bare of all furniture, but there were rugs on the floor and a fire was burning in the kitchen stove.

Apparently there was not a soul in the house. An old mattress and two pillows were on the floor of the living room. A rifle and a pistol, with a partly eaten loaf of bread, were in a corner.

Harrison spied an arithmetic text book on the floor. Turning back the cover he saw written on the fly-leaf: "James De Jute, 337 Robbins ave., Niles, O., grade 5-A, Lincoln school."

Silence fell over the group of officers.

"Jimmie," cried one of the officers.

"Yes, sir; yes, sir," came the response. "Here I am."

The officers quickly found that one of the walls was four feet thick. Harrison and Risher kicked into it. Their shoes crashed through a

KIDNAPED GIRL FOUND DAZED

Columbus, O., March 5 (AP)—Martha Ford, 10, who disappeared from school here at noon Friday, eluded a man who had kidnaped her and held her for 24 hours, police reported today.

The child, dazed and suffering from the effects of an attempted attack, was found on the West Side shortly before noon.

She told police she was lured from the schoolyard by a man and held by him for 24 hours. She could give no details. Police removed her to a hospital.

BULLETINS!

Stamford, Ct., March 5—The Stamford Advocate quoted Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf of the New Jersey state police today as saying that Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh will make another attempt through the press and radio to negotiata for the return of their kidnaped son.

The Lindberghs at the same time, the paper said, will try to obtain assurance that their baby is alive.

An appeal to the kidnapers to photograph the baby and send the reel of undeveloped film to the Lindberghs for development along with communications as to ransom will be made probably today or when "the time is ripe," the Advocate said. It will be requested that an entire film of six sheets be used and that various poses of the baby be taken, so that definite assurance may be furnished of the baby's safety.

New York, March 5 (AP)—The Evening Post today said that one of its reporters had discovered an abundance of ladders of similar wood and construction as that used by the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby.

The reporter saw the ladders in the Consolidated Shipyards at Morris Heights, the Bronx, where, the paper said, the yacht of Thomas M. Lamont, on which Henry (Red) Johnson was employed as a sailor, has been laid up for repair.

The Post said it learned Johnson has been a frequent visitor at the yards.

The ladders, according to the reporter, had square rungs mortised into square uprights. They were of various lengths. In the yards they are used for painting boats in drydock.

Hopewell, N. J., March 5—On another day of absolute lack of clues, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Anne today put their faith that their baby will be found safe upon the element through which they had many times flown hand and hand.

The two waited for their pleas to the kidnapers of their baby to bring them something upon which they might hope for the return of their lost one.

"Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh not only wish, but hope, that whoever is in possession of the child will make every effort to communicate with them."

So the Lindberghs waited.

NO INTEREST IN "RED" JOHNSON

Into the maze of fact and fancy surrounding the most spectacular kidnaping case in history today was injected momentarily the name of Henry (Red) Johnson, friend of nurse Betty Gow. But all the flurry of excitement and the hopes that in him there might be the first definite clues came to naught when, in today's first formal communication to the press, state police offcials announced they were NOT interested in Johnson, held for questioning in Hartford. Despite this denial, Johnson was still held after an all-night grilling.

Previous reports had been that Jersey police officers had gone to Hartford to take part in the examination of Johnson, a friend of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse.

Reporters at the conference also were told there was NO basis for rumors that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh himself had flown to Hartford during the night in connection with investigation of his baby's kidnaping.

The police said Lindbergh still was in his home this morning, but they would NOT say whether Mrs. Lindbergh and her mother were still there.

There were even stricter rules enforced regarding gatherings and parking of automobiles near the entrance of the estate. Maines were kept on the move on the nearest road passing the state for a distance of a couple of miles in each direction.

Under these conditions it was possible that an emissary of the kidnapers might walk untouched up the winding path to the ildless white house on the hill.

But the welcome one did not come—only the mailman with a continuous stream of letters of sympathy, suggestions and the unwanted "crank" missives.

There were almost as many telephone calls as letters.

If they sounded promising, Col. Lindbergh, who has had only a few catnaps since his baby was stolen, would answer the telephone in person.

"LINDBERGH WILL DO ANYTHING"

There were even calls from across the sea—London newspapers who wanted to know as to how the search was progressing.

There was an addition to the plea made via radio and publication by Col. Lindbergh.

It was a semi-official addition, relayed by state troopers.

It was:

"COL. LINDBERGH WILL DO ANYTHING TO GET HIS SON BACK."

The sum of $50,000, the amount asked in the ransom note left behind in the nursery by the kidnapers, was reported on deposit in a nearby city. It was said to be in bills of small denomination in keeping with the request of the baby-stealers.

State troopers said this didn't mean anything except that Col. Lindbergh was ready to deal with the kidnapers whenever they communicated with him.

A rumor spread today that Miss Gow had "confessed," but this was officially denied at the Governor's office in Trenton, and State police reiterated that they had completely exonerated her.

The Englewood chief of police and a sergeant went to Hartford to assist in the questioning of Johnson. A detective there said he believed the information would "crack" the case.

A Chicago man signed a sworn statement giving a Niagara Falls, N. Y., address, where he said the baby was held. No such address could be found.

The mother of the 12-year-old boy kidnaped at Niles, Ohio, a few hours after the Lindbergh baby was taken, sent a message of sympathy and hope to Mrs. Lindbergh. Later, her boy was recovered at Youngstown, Ohio.

APPEAL BRINGS NO RESPONSE

From the closely guarded Lindbergh estate there came today word that there were no developments. This, coming from a source close to the Col. Charles A. Lindbergh family, was interpreted as meaning that no negotiations had been effected with the kidnapers as a result of their signed appeal of yesterday.

Broadcast in six languages last night, and streamered in thousands of newspapers, the plea pledged the honor of the Lindberghs not to "try to injure" the criminals who stole the baby from his crib Tuesday night—if they would only arrange a contact with them.

The world manifested intense interest early today in a report that the flying colonel had taken off for Hartford, where Henry (Red) Johnson, sailor friend of Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, was being questioned by police.

Governor Moore had been informed of the detention of Johnson, and while Hopewell seethed with excitement, state troopers and Englewood police were rushed to Hartford to help with the questioning.

COLONEL READY FOR FLIGHT

While the report of Lindbergh's hop-off seemed mistaken at least two planes were known to be prepared for the famous flier, and speculation as to the reason ran rampant. Whether Col. Lindbergh considered going to Hartford or was getting ready to fly to a rendezvous with the kidnapers was not known.

From far and near streams of "clues" continued to pour in. One which was feverishly checked was a dispatch from Chicago saying the "Secret Six," a crime-battling organization there, had announced a Charles Knudson signed a sworn statement that the Lindbergh baby was held by a Marry Konner at 2816 South ave., Niagara Falls, N. Y. Police found the address a vacant lot.

In Massachusetts all state police were on the qui vive for a roadster "carrying three men and a baby." They said Hartford police advised them it was on the way to Springfield after changing license plates at Wethersfield.

Palled and ill with a cold, Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, who expects another child in May, drew admiration by her courage in bearing up under the ordeal. In the turmoil of a home turned into a police station, she went about her task, only the tense expression of her face betraying the emotion within.

"The Lindberghs are carrying on with a courage not often seen," declared Gov. A. Harry Moore, after visiting them to inform them of developments in the hunt he is directing.

STATE REFUSES IMMUNITY

The simple, affecting appeal which the distraught parents made to the kidnapers of their curly-haired, blue-eyed son still remained unanswered today.

Lindbergh, who unflinchingly braved the perils of the air when his own life was at stake, and Mrs. Lindbergh, whose indomitable courage in the face of heartbreaking tragedy has endeared her to all, begged the kidnapers for their baby "on any terms."

But the dramatic plea, flashed throughout the nation within a few minutes after being issued, failed to induce those who stole the world's most famous baby to communicate with the Lindberghs, even though promised ransom and immunity.

While the parents privately offered immunity, the state did not follow their lead. Atty.-Gen. William A. Stevens at Trenton declared "New Jersey will grant no immunity" to the kidnapers and promised them a "dose of Jersey justice."

His declaration came on the heels of a reported statement by County Prosecutor Marshall, the kidnapers, if they restored the baby safely, would not be prosecuted.

Despite the Stevens pronouncement, one plan was seriously considered to provide free access to the lonely home by the kidnapers.

The army of blue-clad troopers, the cordon of detectives and police officials who now throng the estate's grounds were to be withdrawn for 12 or 24 hours under this proposal.

It was urged that this move would indicate to the abductors that they were safe should they get in direct communication with Lindbergh.

But the "Lone Eagle," temporarily, at least, vetoed this step, it was reported, since he believed the pledge he and his wife extended to the capturers of his baby must have convinced them, if anything could, their emissary would not be molested.

MORE THAN 1100 QUIZZED

Throughout last night, lights blazed from almost every window of the wood-ringed white house where headquarters are established for the troopers and police. A light snow fell, covering the country side.

Betty Gow, whose friend was held in Hartford for questioning, herself had been examined once more by detectives, as were Oliver Wheatley, butler, and his wife, who acts as housekeeper.

It was announced that Miss Gow was entirely cleared of any suspicion.

Five men were questioned late last night by the troopers at headquarters here. Mystery was maintained concerning the identity of the quintet.

Many of the ransom notes and threatening letters being received at the Lindbergh home were taken over by federal detectives from the Treasury Department, sent here to help at the instance of President Hoover.

In all, about 1100 persons were questioned in the country-wide search for the abductors. At least 300 were examined at the scene of the kidnaping.

During the day, more than 500 persons in the vicinity were questioned regarding the skillfully constructed ladder which the kidnapers used in stealing the baby.

Believing it one of their most important clues, troopers canvassed the entire neighborhood in attempts to get some lumberman, farmer, merchant or laborer to identify the wood used in it.

Franklin W. Kelly, contractor, Ewing township, told investigators it might have come from the store building recently torn down. But he had no means of tracing any purchases of the wood.

Motor cars continued to be traced throughout the state. Many persons found themselves halted every few miles and subjected to careful examination.

Four clerks were in the Lindbergh home today assigned specially to handling the flood of mail received there. On one trip, the carrier delivered three sacks full, more than he usually has for his entire route.

"PARENTS BEAR UP WELL"

While many letters are from cranks, the majority either offer sympathy or present possible clues. Theories, plausible and fantastic, are sent in great numbers.

There was some lessening today of the crank variety of missives, ascribed to the threats to bring criminal action against the writers.

"Both Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh, who is expecting another child, are bearing up under the strain of uncertainty," he said after his visit.

"Mrs. Lindbergh keeps up her husband's courage and he sustains hers. They are a very courageous couple."

The recently widowed mother of Mrs. Lindbergh, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, received an offer from Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, to act as mediator with the kidnapers, it was reported.

However, Dr. Hibben, a friend of Mrs. Morrow, late in the day denied this, although Mrs. Morrow had consulted him concerning the kidnaping.

Lindbergh received from David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy in charge of aeronautics, an offer to "put any of our naval facilities" at his disposal.

At the request of a friend of the grief-torn couple, radio stations broadcast the Lindbergh's simple and moving appeal to the kidnapers for their baby in five languages, Spanish, Yiddish, French, German, and Italian.

Despite his great sorrow, the famous Lindbergh smile familiar to millions still hovers at times on his face, though there is a pathetic wistful quality in it now.

The colonel went for a walk with the little black and white terrier, the terrier which failed to bark when the baby was kidnaped. He tramped through the woods for a short while.

In the evening, he and Mrs. Morrow sauntered along the paths near the house.

A police official saw them. He solicitously asked whether there was something Lindbergh wanted.

The colonel smiled and shook his head.

"Thanks," he said, then disappeared into the house.

WELL-PLANNED PLOT

Governor Moore, who has been leading the efforts to trace the abductors, expressed regret of their outcome so far at Jersey City last night.

"The case is practically the same as when it opened," he asserted. "I am convinced the kidnaping is the work of shrewd, cunning and hardened criminals and it is certain they had correct information about the routine in the Lindbergh household.

But Governor Moore was still imbued with a great faith that the attempts to find the Lindbergh baby would finally be crowned with success.

HIBBEN MAY BE NEGOTIATOR

Inspector Harry Walsh, who is handling the investigation at Hopewell, was asked today whether Col. Lindbergh had heard from the kidnapers, directly or indirectly, during the night.

"I cannot answer that question," he said.

"Does that mean that you will not answer it?" he was asked.

"I simply cannot talk about it," he replied.

All efforts to elicit more information on this subject were unavailing.

Accompanied by a number of state troopers, Inspector Walsh paid a visit to Princeton last night for some unannounced and unrevealed purpose. Newspapermen who followed them noticed that all the entrances to Princeton University were guarded by state troopers.

This fact was taken as corroboration of reports that John Grier Hibben, president of the institution, was to undertake the role of mediator between the kidnapers and the Lindbergh family if the former showed any inclination to take advantage of the offer of ransom and immunity volunteered by the parents in their public statements of yesterday.

NURSE CABLES HER MOTHER

Glasgow, Scotland, March 5 (AP)—Betty Gow, nursemaid to the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, cabled her mother here today not to worry.

"I'm heart-broken, but cheer up, mother," the message said. The young woman and her mother have communicated by cable frequently since the kidnaping.

Immunity Is Up to Court of Pardons

Trenton, N. J., March 5 (INS)—Only the Court of Pardons has a right to refuse or grant immunity to the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby, it was definitely established here today by examination of the state statutes.

Although Governor Moore and Col. Lindbergh refused to comment, the opinion is general that the Court will be guided entirely by the wishes of the parents of the baby.

ADVISES LINDY TO ACT ALONE

Mount Holly, N. J., March 5 (INS)—"Col. Lindbergh should clear out all officers from this case and then deal directly with the kidnapers."

This advice was given today by Ellis H. Parker, chief of Burlington county detectives, who has solved many of New Jersey's recent sensational crimes.

"The saving of the child's life is the thing we should all bow to, even though the kidnaper may never be punished," Parker continued. "If Col. Lindbergh pays the price, gets his baby back and then keeps his mouth shut, he will have done what every father would do.

"There is no father or mother in the world who would sacrifice their own flesh and blood to satisfy any laws on the statute books."

Parker, who has confined his activities in the case to his own county, which adjoins Mercer county on the south, said he did not believe the kidnapers would kill the child unless made desperate by police activities.

Utica Postal Clue Is Being Traced

Utica, N. Y., March 5 (INS)—Police of this city today were questioning hotel and railroad employes in a belief they could find the author of a letter to Col. Lindbergh, written on Hotel Majestic stationery, which read:

ALL BABIES LOOK ALIKE IN LINDY HUNT

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hopewell, N. J., March 5—Geography complicates the question of immunity for the Lindbergh baby's kidnapers. The 15-acre estate of the "flying colonel" is partly in Mercer county, partly in Hunterdon. The Mercer prosecutor will "grant any concession necessary for the baby's return." The other prosecutor, who apparently has jurisdiction because most of the estate is in his county, has made no public statement.

BABY GIVES ALARM

Pennsauken, N. J., March 5—Police rushed to Mrs. Edward Miersch's house today because her crying baby jiggled the phone receiver off the hook. Just another false alarm!

RIGHT ON THE JOB!

PRINTS ALWAYS A CLUE

New York, March 5—Any baby fingerprints on the Lindbergh child's toys may be useful, police experts say. Even if Charles stays missing until he's 56 years old they would be a sure means of identification then.

STRAIN CUTS WIFE

Sharon, Pa., March 5—"The anxiety and strain—it takes years from life," says William Whitla, attorney, sympathizing with the Lindberghs. He was kidnaped 20 years ago in a nationally famous case. His father paid $10,000.

GRANDMAS ARE BRAVE

Detroit, March 5—Two tense school ma'ams, gravely concerned about the kidnapers, are bearing up bravely. Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the Colonel, conducted her chemistry classes as usual, while in Hopewell Miss Elizabeth Morrow, Anne Lindbergh's sister did what she could to aid. She went to her private school in Englewood only long enough to transact necessary affairs.

FOR DEATH PENALTY

Nashville, Tenn., March 5—"No punishment that could be devised would be commensurate with the crime," said Senator Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, advocating capital punishment.

IN SIX LANGUAGES

New York, March 5 — Six languages were used to broadcast the Lindberghs' plea for mercy. They were German, Spanish, Italian, French, Yiddish and English.

"MENTAL SADDISTS"

Chicago, March 5—Cranks who write misleading letters to the Lindberghs are "mental sadists," says Dr. Orlando Scott, psychiatrist. "Such people are unable to control their desires and emotions along certain lines."

NEIGHBORS DO BIT

Hopewell, March 5—He's "Neighbor Lindbergh" to the farmers here, and they all say, "I'd like to get my hands on that kidnaper." They recall deeds of kindness, as when the Lindberghs picked up an injured man by a roadside and sped him to a hospital.

PRICES ARE BOOMED

Hopewell, March 5—You can eat a dollar lunch here and still be pretty hungry. Prices are boosted to the 400 news men, radio teachnicians, officers and others who help to swell Hopewell's big "boom." It's $5 a night for a room.

PANGBORN IS BUSY

Hopewell, March 5—Clyde Pangborn, who flew around the world, is flying Lindbergh pictures now.

NOTED SQUAD ON TRIAL

New York, March 5—Thirty shadowy young men are prowling the underworld for tips. The famous undercover police squad whose identity is unknown even to most high police officials is at work. It's the first time in history the whole squad has been assigned to one case.

SIREN TO TELL NEWS

Sandusky, O., March 5—This city is so interested that City Manager Sadler ordered the fire siren blown if the baby is found.

1100 ARE QUIZZED

Hopewell, March 5—The number of people questioned in connection with the kidnaping throughout the country now stands at about 1100, police were told.

BOY'S FUN IS CUT SHORT.

Bridgeport, Ct., March 5 (AP)—A post-card to Col. Lindbergh, bearing the warning "follow instructions or suffer consequences," led to the arrest of John Johnson, 17, of Stratford.

"I was sorry the minute I dropped it into the box," said Johnson. "I did it for fun."

EX-NURSE QUESTIONED

New York, March 5—Ill in bed with laryngitis, Marie Cummings, who nursed Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh through her confinement and cared for Charles in his first weeks, was interviewed by police but could give no clue.

FLOOD OF CALLS

Hopewell, March 5—The flood of telephone calls to the Lindbergh home was so great the exchange put on a censorship. Before a caller can get through to the house he is questioned: "Who are you?" and "Why are you calling the house?"

PEOPLE Who Interest You and What They Are Doing

Ruth Nichols Awarded Trophy by Air League

Paris, March 5—Ruth Nichols, internationally known American aviatrix, is one of two women named by the International League of Aviators as winners of trophies for those who have accomplished most for the advancement of aviation in 1931.

Miss Nichols' trophy was awarded to her because of her various altitude and speed records.

Gen. Italo Bilbo, Italian air minister who led a squadron of army planes across the Atlantic, was named international champion by the League. The other woman flier is Mme. Maryse Bastie, named international women's champion, for her 1800 mile record-breaking flight from France to Russia. Clyde Pangborn was named American national champion.

Archduke Otto Victim of Appendix in Brussels

Brussels, Belgium, March 5—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, young pretender to the Austrian throne, is confined to bed with an attack appendicitis and chicken pox.

An announcement was sent out from Steentckerzeel Castle, where the youthful archduke lives, saying that no alarm was felt about his condition.

The two attacks followed a siege of influenza, a disease from which all members of the household have been suffering for several days.

Vandals Ransack Chelsea Churches

Vandals who entered the Mt. Bellingham Methodist Episcopal Church and the First Baptist Church, both at Bellingham and Shurtleff sts., Chelsea, ransacked closets and desks, it was reported today. Nothing was stolen.

Mellon Rested Up, Ready for Duties in London

Augusta, Ga., March 5—Andrew W. Mellon, who a few days ago was a weary, work-ridden man on his arrival here, will take up his ambassadorial duties at St. James Court in London a much stronger and healthier man.

Lots of exercise, relaxation and the lifting of a load of care have erased the mark long years of worry over national finance put on his face.

"I'm feeling better and better every day now," the ambassador said, during his brisk morning walk in quest of fresh air and sunshine.

EDITH PARDEE CONSTANCE MORROW BETTY PRATT DOROTHY SAWYER

A Massachusetts State police trooper in plain clothes continues to guard Constance Morrow, younger sister of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, in and about Smith College at Northampton. Constance lives at Dewey House, which is also under guard of State police. Constance, indicated by arrow, is shown with other officers of the class of 1935 at Smith. They are Edith Pardee, treasurer; Constance Morrow, vice-president; Betty Pratt, president, and Dorothy Ann Sawyer, secretary. This photo was made last week. (Staff photo.)

These varied glimpses of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., will serve further to impress upon the mind of the nation the features of the 20-months-old baby for whom all America is searching. Practically all of the pictures were taken shortly before last Tuesday evening, when the boy was kidnaped from the home of his famous parents near Hopewell, N. J. The description of the baby is: Weight 30 pounds, height 2 feet 9 inches, curly fair hair, blue eyes, able to walk and talk with the average ability of a child of his age. WATCH FOR THIS CHILD!

TELEPHONES INVARIABLY ATTRACT BABY LINDY AND HE WILL ATTEMPT TO LIFT THE RECEIVER AND TALK INTO THE INSTRUMENT
HE CAN COUNT THE STEPS HE CLIMBS—UP TO FOUR..
HE WHIMPERS AND DRAWS AWAY FROM STRANGERS WHO TRY TO HANDLE HIM..
HE FEEDS HIMSELF AND HAS LEARNED TO COMB HIS OWN HAIR..

HERE IS A DESCRIPTION OF THE BABY....

HE HAS A LARGE DIMPLE IN HIS CHIN......HE IS CUTTING HIS TEETH....HAS BEGUN TO TODDLE...HIS CONVERSATION IS LIMITED TO SUCH PHRASES AS "WANNA GET DOWN,"—"BIG BOW-WOW," ETC....HAS BLUE EYES AND LIGHT CURLY HAIR...HE'S 20 MONTHS OLD, TWO FEET NINE INCHES TALL AND WEIGHS 30 POUNDS....

Drawings illustrate the characteristics of the baby. Telephones attract him and he will try to lift the receiver and talk; he whimpers and shies away from strangers; he can count four while climbing stairs; he can feed himself and has learned to comb his own hair.

Women Spur Writers in Lindy Hunt

Hopewell, N. J., March 5 (INS)—The heartfelt interest of women all over the country in the outcome of the Lindbergh kidnaping case has been attested by a flood of telegrams from mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of reporters covering the story.

Almost hourly they come, messages from the women folk of a tribe not usually pursued by sentiments from home.

"My mother has been going to mass every morning to pray for the Lindbergh baby," declared one correspondent.

Another mother wrote: "Am praying that the baby will be found. Let me know as soon as there is any definite word."

One reporter's young sister wrote him reproachfully: "Why don't you go out and look for little Lindy yourself?"

Swamped With 'Found' Calls

"The radio says the Lindbergh baby's found. Is it true?"

The Boston Evening American was stormed with such telephone queries today.

Individuals on the staff received calls from one friend after another, with the same question.

An effort to trace the false reports failed, but officials said they believed it might be due to heedless amateur radio broadcasters.

Another theory was that listeners had tuned in just in time to hear the closing words of a Lindbergh news broadcast, such as: "The kidnapers have been found and the baby is safe." They missed the preceding word, "Until."

Jersey "Justice" Threat

Trenton, March 5—A taste of "Jersey justice," which in the case of kidnaping is 30 years to life, will be given the kidnapers if found, says State Atty.-Gen. Stevens, scorning the idea of immunity.

CRIME EXPERTS PLAN GREATEST MAN HUNT FOR LINDY BABY

POLICE HEADS HOLD SECRET CONFERENCE

Mulrooney Would Let Committee of Pastors Treat With the Kidnapers Alone

It bears none of the earmarks of those practiced in crime, even though the result has been successfully achieved.

WORK OF AMATEURS

"Police of every state in the union and the long arm of the Federal Government are united in the search for the criminals and the restoration of the child to its parents.

"It is our belief that with this knowledge the kidnapers will soon recognize that their only hope for successful flight and safety lies in their giving up the child by some method that will assure its safe and uninjured return. So long as they retain the child they are in constant danger.

"Its destruction would enormously increase their guilt, their danger, and their certain ultimate retribution to the law and avenging justice.

"It is our belief and hope that they will immediately deposit the child in some safe place, and by prompt notice to the police or Col. Lindbergh personally enable it to be returned in safety to its parents.

"This they will do, it is thought, to relieve themselves from what they must see is a constant encumbrance to their freedom of movement and a hopeless drag on their efforts at flight."

IN SECRET SESSION

The crime experts, who included J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Department of Justice, Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney of New York, State's Attorney John A. Swanson of Cook County, Illinois, Pat Roche, one of Chicago's ace detectives, and the police and detective heads of a score of cities east of the Mississippi River met in utmost secrecy in Governor Moore's private office.

As the doors closed upon the conference, easily the most spectacular and all-embracing convocation of crime experts ever called together in an effort to sove a mystery, Governor Moore and Col. A. Norman Schwartzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, began to lay before the delegates the background of the crime.

On a table before them lay the crude tri-sectional ladder with which the kidnapers gained entrance to the Lindbergh baby's nursery last Tuesday night and which comprises the chief clue thus far uncovered after three days of searching and investigation.

VISIT CRIME SCENE

The meeting began at 11:15 a. m. Less than half an hour later word went out that the conferees were in agreement that their work demanded a thorough first-hand survey of the scene of the crime, and it was announced that they would leave soon after noon.

A fleet of 10 autos was used to take the experts to the scene of the kidnaping.

When Gov. Moore had concluded his remarks at the conference Commissioner Mulrooney took the floor.

"I have a suggestion to make," he said. "It seems to me that all plans made so far to bring about the return of the Lindbergh baby have been very vague.

"I suggest that a committee of clergymen and lawyers be appointed to deal with the situation and take it out of the hands of everyone else—that is, if Col. Lindbergh wants to meet the demands of the kidnapers.

"This committee should direct its efforts toward giving the kidnapers fair play. The promises made so far are not convincing, that is, they do not sound convincing enough to make the kidnapers have any confidence in the promises of immunity. The committee would serve this purpose."

LINDY IN PROTEST

As the conference neared its close, Gov. Moore revealed that Col. Lindbergh had just telephoned him to protest about the publicity given to police efforts to apprehend the kidnapers.

"The Colonel said that many wild reports have hurt the chances of his getting his child back safely," Gov. Moore declared.

At the beginning of the session a flurry of excitement was caused when attendants found a man hiding in a shower-bath adjoining the Governor's office. He was promptly ejected by state troopers.

Those present included Capt. J. McDevitt, deputy superintendent of the Boston police, and Thomas E. Bligh, chief of the Massachusetts state police.

She, Too, Had Lost Her Little Son

Niles, O., March 5 (AP)—Mrs. James DeJute, Sr., whose son, James, Jr., 12, was kidnaped Wednesday just a few hours after the Lindbergh baby was stolen, today sent the following message to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh:

"My son, Jimmy, was kidnaped a few hours after your child. I am suffering the same heart aches you are and praying that God may send them both back to us. I feel in my heart that when your child is returned, mine also will be returned to me."

If Baby Is Cared for, He'll Be All Right, Lindberghs Believe

By DOROTHY DUCAS

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.)

Hopewell, N. J., March 5 (INS)—If the Lindbergh baby is being cared for expertly by his kidnapers, he is happy.

His travels, his strange surroundings and the absence of his parents will not frighten or upset him. He is used to all these things.

This is the knowledge that keeps Anne Morrow Lindbergh from "going mad" with worry, as the frantic search for her 20-month-old son continues. It is the one straw at which she clutches, the only bit of knowledge she hugs close to her heart with any degree of comfort.

"If they bring him back safe and sound, he will never know anything has happened to him," she says.

The remarkably gallant young wife and mother has been in touch with a close family friend daily. It was from this friend, who asked that her name be withheld, that International News Service learned the secret of Anne Lindbergh's miraculous composure.

USED TO CHANGES

"You see," this reporter was informed today, "young Charlie has done quite a bit of traveling in his life. He has been back and forth between Hopewell and Englewood. Last summer he went to Maine. He is used to quick changes of scenery.

"Also, he is not accustomed to seeing his father and mother every day. He will not feel there is anything a'miss simply because they are not around. They have been away from him many times for days on end, and last year they took that long trip to China, leaving him behind.

"If he is comfortable, wherever he is, he must be happy. That is the one good feature of this terrible thing—the only blessing—the baby will not know."

Anne Lindbergh is not in a state of collapse or anything near that, it was learned.

"She and her husband are keeping their gallant spirits up,' is the way their friend described them.

No doctor has been summoned to attend her, and it is believed none will be needed. Not only is Mrs. Lindbergh a woman of great courage and endurance but her health has been excellent. She does not expect her second baby until early next September. Only a slight cold troubles her today, a cold brought on by lack of sleep.

The ominous note sounded by police in their admission that practically all clues to date had proved futile has struck no answering chord within the Lindbergh house. Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh are not without hope.

"They will never abandon hope," it was said. "If this search continues for weeks and for months they will continue to hope. They will go on trying to think their baby will be returned."

Immediate action is their desire, naturally, but reason tells them that it may be later, when the feverish activity has abated, that the culpable parties will communicate directly with them.

HE'LL BE BACK, THEY BELIEVE

Now, with every unit of police in the entire country on the lookout for the kidnapers, with every family and every individual eager to help get the world's most famous baby back to his home, the abductors might hesitate to come forward, even at the colonel's uncompromising surrender of his rights and his declaration of willingness to pay the ransom, but later, when the scene has been somewhat cleared, surely they will lead the golden-haired boy back to his heart-hungry parents.

At least that is the way Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh console themselves. This is the way they are determined to view the future. Until there is definite proof the baby no longer lives, they will keep his nursery ready for his chubby little figure.

And they will continue to say, swallowing the lumps in their throats:

"He will be back, he will be with us again as before, not even realizing that he was stolen away."

KIDNAPED BOY FOUND; 2 HELD

flimsy structure which was revealed as a false wall.

Within a few minutes the thin partition was ripped away. There stood 12-year-old Jimmie, white and shivering, between two young men, one of whom held a revolver.

Jimmie recognized Deputy Sheriff Lundy, and rushed into the officer's arms.

"Take me home, please," he said, "to my father and mother."

He was trembling, but said he was not afraid. He exclaimed he was glad, then burst into tears.

The abductors, sullen and with arrogant bearing, were hand-cuffed by the officers. One was said to be a suspected Niles bootlegger, sought since the morning the boy disappeared. The other gave an address in Brooklyn, N. Y. Police said they did not know him.

The distracted parents of the boy did not know of the recovery until Sheriff Risher's car drove up in front of the DeJute home, bringing the boy back.

IN GOOD CONDITION

The boy was in good condition and did not complain of his treatment while in the hands of the captors, authorities said.

Since Wednesday morning, the boy's father, James De Jute, Sr., had been begging the kidnapers to send some word. He had offered $1000 for his son's return. They failed to communicate with him.

Mrs. De Jute, hysterical with fear and anxiety, became ill yesterday.

The abduction occurred Wednesday morning while James was on his way to school. Two men, who first asked him whether he was the contractor's son, seized him and forced him into their automobile and whisked him away.

De Jute held firm in theory that the kidnaping was done to obtain money, despite the absence of any ransom note. Authorities, however, worked on the belief revenge for some fancied wrong was the motive.

BIG MEAL FOR JIMMIE

When the screaming siren of a county car sounded, far down the street, Jimmie's father and aunt rushed out to the curb today to welcome him. The car had not stopped when Jimmie leaped into the waiting arms of his father.

"Oh, Jimmie, oh, Jimmie," sobbed the father, the tears streaming down his cheeks.

The two stood for a full minute neither saying anything and then Jimmie, his father and aunt rushed into the house and upstairs to see his mother.

Jimmy jumped for the bed and crawled up alongside his weeping parent. There he was smoothered with hugs and kisses.

After the first greetings Jimmie sat back on the bed, while his father, tears still streaming down his face, paced the room. Aunts, uncles, and other relatives crowded into the room.

"I'm pretty hungry," he said.

SAW JOHNSON TUESDAY NIGHT

Englewood, N. J., March 5 (AP)—Mrs. W. T. Sherman, proprietor of the rooming house where Henry (Red) Johnson, held in Hartford, Ct., for questioning in connection with the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, said Johnson was at her home Tuesday night, but she could not remember whether he was there all evening. The Lindbergh child was kidnaped Tuesday night.

She was equally uncertain regarding a telephone call Johnson is reported to have made Tuesday evening to Miss Betty Gow, nursemaid for the Lindbergh child, at the Lindbergh home at Hopewell.

Mrs. Sherman, a woman of about 65 years, whose hearing is defective, displayed extreme annoyance at being questioned and after answering in sharp, laconic sentences one or two questions, she slammed the door in a reporter's face.

Earlier in the day she had said over the telephone that Johnson had lived at her home for the past six months. She described him as a man of sober habits, who kept pretty much to himself. She said she knew he was employed on the yacht of Thomas Lamont, partner in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., but that he had been laid off "for a few weeks while they are repainting the yacht."

Mrs. Sherman expressed her belief Johnson had nothing to do with the kidnaping, but admitted she knew very little of his movements. Meanwhile, police learned Johnson bought a green Chrysler coupe at a garage here about two weeks ago.

KIDNAP PLOT IN MALDEN FOILED

Because their baby somewhat resembles the kidnaped Lindbergh child, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ganlong of Havelock st., Malden, was invaded by three unidentified men, one of whom flashed a special police badge.

Only because the father of the child, who works nights, was at home sleeping, did they abandon their plan of taking the baby away.

The Ganong baby is Albert, 19 months, a month younger than Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. With his hat on he resembles the missing child, but his hair is very short and the resemblance disappears when the hat is off.

"Why did you clip the kid's hair?" the leader of the three men demanded to know, according to Mrs. Margaret Ganong.

"The three men came to the door," she said, "and asked to see my baby. One flashed a badge. One started to ransack the house, while the others sat and watched me. Then they ordered me to dress Albert, but when they heard my husband was home, they left.

She watched them drive away in a sedan in which was a woman.

SAVED FROM 'KIDNAPERS'

Little 19-months-old Albert Ganong of Havelock st., Melden, whose purported resemblance to the stolen Lindbergh baby led to a "kidnaping" plot in Malden. Three men posing as police officers called at the house, asked to see the child and then prepared to take him away. They fled when the mother, Mrs. Roy Ganong, let it be known that her husband was at home. (Staff photo.)

'Daddy Bud' Stillman Sees Peril for Mrs. Lindbergh

James A. ("Bud") Stillman, Jr., has a double interest in the Lindbergh case.

He became a father two weeks ago, and he is a student specializing in baby cases at Harvard Medical School.

The condition of Anne Lindbergh, who is soon to become a mother again, may be seriously affected by the kidnaping of her first-born, in his opinion.

"Think of the suffering and anguish undergone by the expectant mother," he said to a reporter at his home on Newell rd., Brookline.

"This tragic affair may bring serious consequences to Mrs. Lindbergh, in addition to the sorrow that will be hers the rest of her life, if the child is not returned.

"In view of the circumstances, it is especially to be regretted that the Lindberghs were chosen the victims of this outrage and at this time.

"Capital punishment is too good for the kidnapers. I have followed the case closely since the first news, like everybody else in America. I am very sorry for Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

"I don't think the kidnapers showed much brains in victimizing the Lindberghs, for they are in the public eye and immensely popular, and anything that happens to them affects the public in general.

"I hope they find the baby and I hope the kidnapers are forced to pay for their atrocious crime."

Stillman, who was just leaving for a hospital, where he is doing service as an interne, said his wife, the former Lena Wilson, and Baby Lena Anne—named for his wife and his mother—are doing nicely at the New England Baptist Hospital. He expects them home in about two weeks.

Put Capone on Trail, Says Ex-Scotland Yard Head

By SIR BASIL THOMPSON

Former Chief of Great Britain's Scotland Yard

As Told to an International News Service Correspondent

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Paris, March 5 (INS)—Al Capone is the best qualified man in the United States to find Col. Charles Lindbergh's baby.

Sir Basil Thompson

Capone rules the most complete criminal organization in the world, which could be put into action to capture the kidnapers and bring back the baby.

If I were conducting the search I should be inclined to release Capone temporarily and set him on the trail, promising him liberty if successful.

This, in my opinion, is preferable to bargaining or permitting Col. Lindbergh to pay ransom, which would be liable to create a disastrous precedent.

I am confident Al Capone's threat to "bump off" the perpetrators would scare the kidnapers into returning the child.

If it is true the kidnapers are seeking $50,000 ransom, I am convinced they will treat the child with utmost care.

But I doubt whether they will follow Mrs. Lindbergh's request that medicine be administered, as this would necessitate visits to druggists, thus risking their betrayal.

I am intensely interested in the Lindbergh kidnaping. I am unable to recall a serious case of kidnaping in Europe in the last 50 years except that of the white Russian leader, Gen. Alexei Koutepoff, which after all was, as you might say in America, "Just an old Russian custom."

England is especially free from such crimes, perhaps because she is a "tight little island," unlike the vast spaces of the United States where police departments are not so closely co-ordinated.

Scotland Yard's "crime index," combined with exhaustive documentation of criminal characters and also our "narks" or stool-pigeons who are a valuable aid, make kidnaping in England practically impossible.

I think the Lindbergh case is a most dastardly crime, all the more deplorable since the police certainly face one of the most difficult problems in criminal annals.

The principal cause, in my opinion, of so many flagrant cases of kidnaping in the United States, is the lack of quick and efficient justice.

RANSOM IS SEEN AS SCREEN OF REVENGE

By BERT FORD

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Northampton, March 5—That a gang operating for underworld interests in Mexico kidnaped "Baby Lindy," first born of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, was the new and startling theory advanced here today.

Persons close to the Morrow and Lindbergh families declared that the demand for a ransom was a mere smoke screen to conceal the real motive of revenge. They contended that the abducted child's late grandfather, former United States Senator Dwight W. Morrow, might have had secret enemies while ambassador to Mexico, and that they have resorted to this sort of vengeance on the family.

THREATS REPORTED

Supporters of the latest theory insist that members of the Lindbergh and Morrow households have been tormented by threats which have never been made public. They claim that Mrs. Lindbergh's sister Constance, 18, a freshman at Smith College, and her brother, Dwight Morrow Jr., 21, a junior at Amherst, recently received threats by mail, despite denials by the family.

They cite dispatches from Hopewell, N. J., scene of the kidnaping, published within a few days, telling of threats made on Col. Lindbergh. The violent extortion letters sent to Constance Morrow when she was 15 and a student at Milton Academy three years ago were also recalled.

They say early threats were withheld from the public until letters finally became so alarming, with threats to maim or kill Constance, that the police and a private detective agency were called in. A trap to snare the offenders in this instance by having a girl detective place a decoy package, supposed to contain the $10,000 demanded, proved futile.

However, the alarm felt for Constance at the time was so tense that she was removed from the academy and went with her mother and the Lindberghs to her father's summer place at North Haven, Me.

CONSTANT GUARD

Concern for Constance's safety has again become so acute since the abduction of her 20-month-old nephew that armed state troopers in civilian attire have been guarding her night and day ever since.

Many here suspect that this guard which is to be maintained "indefinitely" may have been promoted by recent undisclosed threats aimed at her and her brother, more than by fears because of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

With two members of the Morrow family in educational institutions in this region, speculation naturally is keen. The Mexican hypothesis shared interest today with another theory that has gained strength in police and college circles hereabouts in the past 48 hours. This is a theory that the kidnaping of "Baby Lindy" was an "inside job."

Local and State police and certain persons in college circles feel that strangers would not have been able to go so direct to the nursery in the Hopewell, N. J., home, without assistance from some present or former members of the household.

A report that Constance had gone to live temporarily at the home of President Neilson was denied today. She continues to occupy her room in the Dewey house, almost next to the room occupied by Frances St. John Smith, daughter of a New York broker, who disappeared three years ago.

Johnson "Much in Love With Nurse"

New York, March 5 (AP)—Fred Johnson, 35, told Brooklyn police today that his brother, Henry, who has been undergoing questioning at Hartford, Ct., in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping, was very much in love with Miss Betty Gow, nurse to the Lindbergh baby.

"They would be married," he said, "but work for a sailor in the winter time is slack."

German Diplomat Shot in Moscow

Berlin, March 5 (INS)—Fritz Von Twardowski, counselor of the German embassy in Moscow, was wounded in the neck and hand today by a would-be assassin, according to reports received here from the Soviet capital.

His assailant, who was arrested, fired four shots as Twardowski was driving through the streets in an official embassy car.

Millis Official Dies of Auto Injuries

Framingham, March 5 (AP)—Stanley Clark, 70, a member of the board of assessors of Millis for a number of years, who was struck by an automobile a week ago, died in the Framingham Hospital today.

Navy Cut Opposed

Chicago, March 5—Mobilization of 25,000 speakers for a campaign to oppose any reduction in the army and navy was proposed by the American Legion today.

Beau of Nurse Is Still Held 'On Own Story'

By JAMES J. SMITH

Hartford, Ct., March 5—Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor admirer of Betty Gow, nurse for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was still in a courthouse cell here this afternoon despite the announcement from Hopewell, N. J., that he was "not wanted."

County authorities, holding a series of conferences surrounded every development with secrecy—resorting to violence to keep reporters away—and refused even to discuss the case with three Newark detectives who arrived at 4 o'clock this morning hoping to question Johnson.

Whether in continuing to hold Johnson, who was arrested last night at the home of his brother here, officials are acting on secret orders from Hopewell was not made known.

LOCKED IN CELL

A report spread through the crowd of 300 persons gathered outside the courthouse that the announcement from Hopewell that Johnson was not wanted for questioning was in the nature of a "smoke screen."

Certainly he is wanted here for questioning. He was grilled all night until 4 o'clock this morning and then locked in a cell in the courthouse for further questioning by State Atty. Hugh Alcorn and County Detective Edward J. Hickey.

Aside from a statement by Alcorn that Johnson would be "held on the strength of his own story," officials gave no other indication as to whether formal charges would be lodged against him. Alcorn indicated at 2 p. m., however, that there was no immediate intention of releasing the Englewood sailor.

BOTTLE CAP "CLUE"

Sgt. Edward McGrath and Inspectors J. F. Schaible and Edward O'Leary, who sped here from Newark last night gained no more information than did the press. Neither Alcorn nor Hickey would talk with them and they were not permitted to get near Johnson.

Johnson came here from his Englewood, N. J., home and in the green sedan in which he traveled was found an empty milk bottle marked "Newark, Alldair Dairy." The cap, which for some reason had been replaced on the empty bottle, bore the date, March 2.

Alcorn and Hickey and deputy sheriffs were closeted in the former's office on the third floor of the court house at noon and a crowd of newspapermen, some of whom had flown from distant points, were waiting outside the door for a statement promised by Alcorn.

ATTACK UPON REPORTER

Deputy Sheriff Harmon Carriere came out of the conference room and was asked to carry a note inside to Alcorn from the newspapermen. He refused and became incensed and ordered the reporters downstairs.

They moved toward the stairs, but not fast enough for him, and he half-hit, half-shoved Alexander Kendrick of the Philadelphia Inquirer. Kendrick stumbled and nearly fell and lost his glasses, which broke. He was seized and taken upstairs and the confusion spread to the crowd outside the courthouse, who sought to rush the doors.

A man named Shipmaker, proprietor of a filling station at Rocky Hill, near here, was called before Alcorn and Hickey this afternoon to testify regarding a report he had seen a man, woman, and baby in a car resembling Johnson's pass his place Wednesday afternoon.

Johnson is reported to have said he arrived here at 1:30 Wednesday morning, and Alcorn is said to have evidence he was not in Hartford until 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Another unvertified report was that Johnson had said he had a date with Miss Gow at Hopewell at 8 o'clock on the night the Lindbergh babe was stolen.

He has been a sailor on Thomas Lamont's yacht, Renyard, for three years and is understood to have met Miss Gow for the first time at North Haven, Me., last summer, when the Morrow family and the Lindberghs were there. He was seen much in her company at North Haven.

Hartford authorities said they were holding him "on the strength of his own story." They were extremely secretive as to the result of their questioning. Detective Hickey said following Johnson's arrest that he believed he had obtained "a very important clue."

John Johnson, brother of the sailor, said police were "making a mistake" in believing his brother was connected in any way with the abduction.

SAW GIRL LAST WEEK

The last time Johnson saw Miss Gow, police learned, was late last week. He telephoned her Tuesday night—the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped—about 9 o'clock, police said. At that time he inquired about the health of the baby, who was ill with a cold.

On Wednesday morning a waitress in an Englewood, N. J., restaurant where Johnson regularly took his meals, told him of the kidnaping, and Johnson appeared greatly surprised and expressed disbelief.

"Why, I was talking with the baby's nurse at 9 o'clock last night," she quoted him as saying, "and she said the baby was all right."

Johnson's green coupe was seized and driven to the courthouse yard, where experts went to work on it for fingerprints.

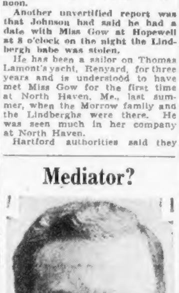
The whole case was surrounded with an air of mystery not readily understandable, in view of the Hopewell report that Johnson was not even wanted for questioning there, and that Miss Gow had been absolved of any suspicion.

Prayers for Lindy Baby in New York

New York, March 5 (INS)—Prayers for the safe return of the Lindbergh baby will be offered today in St. Patrick's Cathedral, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and many other churches throughout New York city.

Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Bishop William T. Manning and other religious leaders urged all citizens to pray that the kidnapers "repent and see the full meaning of their crime."

Mediator?



President Hibben of Princeton who, it is reported, will act as a "go-between" in the Lindbergh kidnaping. The grounds of Princeton are guarded by New Jersey troopers.

Kidnaper Asked to Phone Police Head

Trenton, N. J., March 5 (AP)—Gov. Moore today announced that if anyone wished to give information about the stolen Lindbergh baby (and his announcement was generally taken as a direct suggestion to the kidnapers) they could telephone Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, superintendent of state police, at Trenton 4212.

Jersey Police Say They Have No Interest in Johnson

Trenton, N. J., March 5—Any hopes that Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor friend of Betty Gow, the nurse of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby son, might hold the key to the child's kidnaping were blasted here today by Maj. Charles Shoeffel of the New Jersey state police.

Despite the fact that Johnson was questioned all night by police of Hartford, Ct., where he had gone to visit his brother the morning after the kidnaping, Major Shoeffel insisted that he was not wanted in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"Johnson was never wanted," Major Shoeffel said. "He is not wanted now. He has never been suspected in conection with the kidnaping."

Maj. Shoeffel was asked here how it happened that Johnson was picked up by the Hartford police, who asserted they had acted at the request of New Jersey authorities.

"Johnson was picked up at request of the Englewood police," Maj. Shoeffel said. "Hopewell has never wanted him."

Johnson is a resident of Englewood. It was there that he met Miss Gow, in whom both the Lindbergh family and the police have implicit confidence.

With equal emphasis, Maj. Shoeffel disposed of other reports concerning Johnson's activities and past history. Among them was the rumor that at one time he had been employed either by the Lindberghs or by the family of the late Senator Dwight Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father.

"Red" Johnson Arrest Gives North Haven a Shock

North Haven, Me., March 5—This little island community where "Baby" Lindbergh spent last summer at the Morrow estate had its second shock today with news of the arrest at Hartford of Henry "Red" Johnson.

Johnson is even better known here than Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, whose companion he was on many island trips last summer.

He has been in and out of North Haven for three summers as a member of the crew on the yacht of Thomas Lamont, who also has a luxurious home on the island.

Man Who Shot Girl Dies

Ludlow, March 5 (AP)—Germania Ramos, 52, who shot his daughter, Esmeralda, 20, last Tuesday night and then wounded himself, died today. The daughter is recovering.

'e Sale for ts

With the Candid Camera

By CANDID CAMERA

Do you know what I did yesterday? I went to the Lenox Hotel, where the Disabled Ex-Service-men's Exchange was holding a sale of articles made by men who were in the Great War. These fighters are not able to go out and do hard work but they certainly know how to make things. And we must give the folks who are backing this organization a lot of credit. They make it possible for the vets to sell their articles and wares. They buy. They aid in many ways.

Well, as I stepped off the elevator, I met Mrs. Timothee Adamowski, vice-president of the organization, making a sale of fancy scarfs to Mrs. Curtis Guild, Boston society leader.

As I walked around the "store," I met James C. Barry, an official of the exchange, who was persuading Mrs. Earl C. Anthony, of Brookline, to buy a fancy bag, and thus help some poor man, who, without this organization, would probably have no means of making a living.

Now let's see some of the salespeople. Mrs. Charles Royce Butler is the woman holding the blankets and her fellow "salesgirl" is Mrs. Carroll J. Swan.

Well, after seeing the fine work done by these men, and the fine work done by the volunteer "salesladies," I started back to the office. On my way, I met Miss Katheryn Muir, who is showing you the piece of hammered silverware that she purchased. (Staff photos.)

Cong. Andrew Favors Drastic Kidnap Law

Cong. A. Piatt Andrews announced today he was in favor of Federal kidnaping laws with extreme penalties, although as a general principle he was against interfering with the police powers of the states.

"The crime is recognized as fiendish and heinous by everyone," he said. "Because it may so easily involve several states and because it requires the speediest possible action in order to save the lives of the victims, I shall favor any Federal legislation the Constitution allows to stop it."

Avalanches Fatal

Piacenza, Italy, March 5 (AP)—Three persons were killed and ten injured in two successive avalanches which swept yesterday over a crew which was opening snow-bound roads to isolated mountain villages.

JAPS, CHINESE BATTLE WEST OF SHANGHAI

Nanking, China, March 5 (AP)—A report from the headquarters of the Chinese 19th Route Army to the Foreign Office today said large forces of Japanese troops were vigorously attacking from Nanziang, about 15 miles west of Shanghai.

Shanghai March 5 (INS)—Japanese forces of more than 20,000 men are holding a 15-mile front, well inland from the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers and extending to a point 25 miles north of Shanghai, Gen. Yoshinori Shirakawa said today.

He said his men held the entire line from Liuho south through Kating to Nanziang, the latter point having been the scene of heavy fighting the last few days. Kating, too, has seen several severe skirmishes.

Opposing him, he declared, are 70,000 Chinese, more than three times as many men as he has. In his numbers he includes land naval forces.

The Chinese Nineteenth Route Army headquarters has been moved to Chenyi, one station west of Tushan, it was announced in a dispatch from the commander, Gen. Tsai Ling-Kai.

Meanwhile the Chinese, in partial confirmation of this great Japanese strength in the north, charged the Japanese had landed 35,000 new troops on the Yangtze bank at Liuho. This, they pointed out, placed the Japanese forces throughout the area more than double the 20-kilometer (12.4 miles) distance from Shanghai, to which the Japanese demanded the Chinese withdraw.

Chinese officials refused to consider all peace overtures, still demanding that Japanese troops withdraw from Chinese soil before truce negotiations begin.

Denmark Backs U. S. for League Warning to Japs

Geneva, March 5 (INS)—The contention of United States Secretary of State Stimson that any successes achieved by Japan in China or Manchuria by violence cannot be recognized by the powers was upheld today by Dr. P. Munch of Denmark in addressing the League of Nations Assembly.

Condemnation of the invasion of China and a refusal to accept Japan's excuses also marked other speeches.

Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary-General, announced he had received notification from Secretary Stimson that the United States would participate in the League's Shanghai truce commission.

Dr. W. W. Yen of China said he had received telegrams from Shanghai indicating Japanese planes had bombarded Soochow and established troops well outside the 12.4-mile limit Japan had set for herself.

BOSTON TO PRAY FOR BABY

Prayers will be offered in Greater Boston churches this week-end for the safe return of the baby of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Catholics, Protestants and Jews will unite in asking God for the speedy return of the baby to his grief-stricken parents.

As there is not sufficient time in which to officially order clergymen to ask for such prayers, the ministers, priests and rabbis will do it on their own initiative.

Dr. J. W. Brougher, pastor of Tremont Temple (Baptist), said today:

"I shall not only ask my people to pray for the safe and speedy return of the Lindbergh baby, but I shall also make some comment on kidnaping and the necessity of a uniform law.

"Kidnaping should be dealt with very severely."

LYNN MAN DIES; KIN SOUGHT

With the death of Winfield Leach, 53, found early today in a Summer st., Lynn, rooming house, police started search for relatives of the man in whose room bank books totalling $5000 were found. Police say death was due to heart trouble.

Mrs. Jennie Massey, who runs the lodging house, found the body.

The man is believed to have no relatives. A son was killed in the World War.

Arthur Dana Story, Ship Builder, Dead

Essex, March 5—Arthur Dana Story, a scion of America's first shipbuilder and builder himself of three international racers, died today from a shock suffered Thursday.

Story, father-in-law of W. W. Lufkin, collector of customs at Boston, was 60 years old.

Besides the schooners Henry Ford, Columbia and Henry L. Thebaud, contestants in international fishermen's races, Story built the schooner Puritan, a contender of some years ago.

Honolulu Is Lenient With Attackers

Here is the third in a series of analytical articles prepared by Gilbert Parker, dealing with the background of the Massie case, which will again be in the world's spotlight March 10 with the trial of the four American defendants in the alleged "honor killing" of a native.

By GILBERT PARKER

International News Service Correspondent

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Honolulu, March 5 (INS)—Although it remained for the Massie case to focus attention on conditions in Honolulu, crimes against women and children on the islands have been appallingly high in recent years, a study of the statistics revealed today.

Two forces on the islands—navy circles and the Honolulu Citizens' Organization for Good Government—have both charged that courts have been tolerant towards such offences, and that no serious effort has been made to check criminal attacks.

The Massie trial itself was expected to throw a startling light on island conditions. On March 10, Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and two naval enlisted men will face a judge and jury for the "honor killing" of Joseph Kahahawai, one of five men accused of attacking Mrs. Massie.

TWO IN OTHER CASE

Mrs. Anne Kluegel, former California resident and now militant chairman of the good government body here, has led the drive for legislative reform on the islands.

Supporting her contention of laxity, Mrs. Kluegel cited an angle of the Massie case. Two of the youths charged with participating in the attack on Mrs. Massie, she pointed out, were among a gang of six hoodlums that criminally assaulted a Chinese girl in March, 1929.

These youths were Ben Ahakuelo, a Hawaiian, and Henry Chang, a Chinese. Ahakuelo and Chang with the other four members of the group were sentenced to prison for terms of four months to 15 years, the jury recommending leniency. At the end of four months they were pardoned.

In the case of Ahakuelo representations were made to the prison board that because of his prowess as a boxer, he should be freed on parole to represent the territory in the amateur boxing championships in Madison Square Garden, New York. Ahakuelo's final discharge was approved by Gov. Lawrence M. Judd.

CITES LENIENCY

Mrs. Kluegel, in her fight to clean up conditions on the islands, selected at random cases from a list of crimes indicating, she said, a tendency to regard criminal attacks in the same category as petty theft, automobile stealing or burglary.

The cases cited by Mrs. Kluegel follow:

April 14, 1929—Man given three to five years for assault on girl.

Sept. 21, 1929—Man given suspended sentence on plea of guilty to offense against girl under 16 years of age.

Sept. 28, 1929—Man given five years for attack on girl involving exceptional brutality.

Harvard Professor to Wed Art Student

Prof. Otto Oldenberg of Arlington st., Cambridge, an instructor in physics at Harvard, and Catherine Koessler of Berkeley st., Cambridge, filed intentions to marry at Cambridge City Hall today.

Miss Koessler gave her age as 33 and said that she was an art student, while Prof. Oldenberg gave his age as 43. No date has been set for the wedding.

Revolt Fails, Dies

Helsingfors, Finland, March 5 (AP)—Kustaa Latvala, one of the leaders of the Lapua (Fascist) group in Finland, committed suicide today in disappointment over the failure of the Fascist rebellion.

CARGO OF 'GOOD LIQUOR' GOES WRONG

$50,000 LIQUOR CARGO, BOSTON BOAT SEIZED

The Boston motor yacht Kelble, with a $50,000 liquor cargo and crew of five men, was captured by the Coast Guard patrol boat 813 near Warren Point, R. I., early today after a 10-mile chase in which the rum runner attempted to shake pursuit by throwing out a smoke screen.

The Kelble was sighted near shore by the patrol boat, which gave chase when the yacht failed to heed its warning signals.

A round of machine-gun fire from the pursuing craft caused the yacht to heave to and the vessel was seized and taken with its crew to the Wood's Hole coast guard station.

A thousand cases of choice liquors were found aboard. The vessel registered Jan. 29 to Milton Lindon of Garland st., Chelsea.

Boat Is Caught Landing 500 Cases of Rum; Five Men Held

More than 500 cases of choice liquors were seized this morning along with the much sought rum runer Santa Rita, while she was attempting to land a load of liquor off Hospital Point, Beverly Cove.

After a two-mile chase in Beverly Harbor, the Santa Rita managed to get into Hospital Point and was about to unload when the coast guard patrol boat 2394, with Roy Fitzgerald, from the Gloucester station in charge, seized the boat and liquor and took five members of the crew into custody.

The boat and liquor were taken to the Appraisers' Stores in Boston today.

The Santa Rita is believed by the authorities to have unloaded a large cargo of liquor in Scituate several weeks ago.

LONE COP NABS 2 IN HOLDUP

A lone Weymouth police sergeant gave chase to an alleged bandit automobile early today and after crowding the machine off the road at Weymouth Landing, arrested and handcuffed, at gunpoint, two men.

The car, with William J. Ellis, 26, single, Hampshire st., Cambridge, and John J. Sherlock, 29, Museum st., Somerville, widower and father of two children, according to police, raced neck and neck with the machine driven by Sergt. Thomas A. Boyle from a gas station at Main and Washington sts., Weymouth.

The men, Sergt. Boyle said, were leaving the gas station when he drove up. When they saw him he said, they jumped into their car and sped off, and Sergt. Boyle gave chase.

At their arraignment before Judge Avery in Quincy, the men were charged with breaking and entering in the night time and larceny. They were held in $5000 each for the grand jury. An additional charge was lodged against them when a telephone pay station box was found in their machine.

On the charge of cutting telephone wires they were held in $2000.

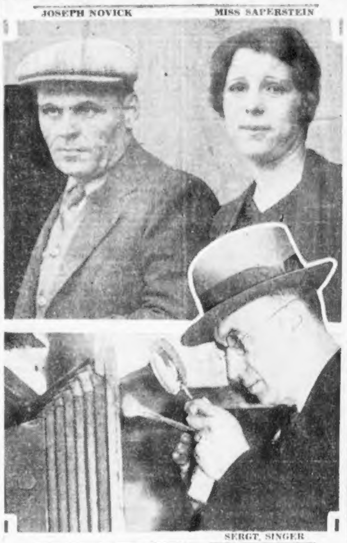
Inquiry Ordered on 6-Hr. R. R. Work Day

Washington, March 5 (AP)—A House resolution directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the advisability of a six-hour day for railroad employes was approved today by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Train Hits Crowd

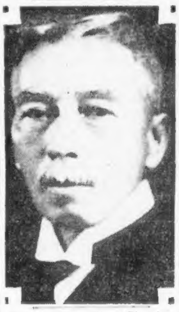
Tokio, March 5 (AP)—Seven persons were killed last night at the railway station of a northwestern suburb when a freight train ran into a crowd that had gathered around another another train.

HELD UP AT PISTOL POINT



Forced by bandits' pistols to stand and deliver, Joseph Novick, proprietor of a Westwood st. (Dorchester) coal yard, and Miss May Saperstein, cashier, were robbed of $350 today. A bandit girl sat in a car in front of the office and drove away with the bandits after the robbery. Police Sergt. Max Singer of headquarters is shown in lower photo examining the safe for finger prints. (Staff photo.)

Slain Jap Leader



Takuma Dan, 74, millionaire Tokio merchant and liberal who was assassinated in the Japanese capital today. He was the third leader slain in the present wave of patriotic frenzy sweeping Nippon. He was educated in Boston.

SLAIN BARON WAS TECH MAN

Baron Takuma Dan, 74, killed in Tokio yesterday, was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1878 and at the time of death was president of the Technology Association of Japan, composed of Japanese graduates.

Prior to attending Technology Baron Dan attended an American preparatory school. While at Technology he studied under Prof. Robert T. Richards, head of the department in mining.

Baron Dan was regarded as one of the most loyal Technology men of foreign birth. His graduation from Technology was instrumental in causing many Japanese to follow his lead.

On March 12, 1929, President Stratton of Technology sent to Baron Dan a citation in honor of the Jap's elevation to the peerage of his country.

Springfield Truck Driver Is Killed

Norwalk, Ct., March 5 (AP)—Simon A. Sweet, 44, West Springfield, Mass., died today at Norwalk Hospital from a fractured skull and internal injuries three hours after his truck was wrecked in a crash with another truck. The second truck is owned by Charles Richard of Bridgeport and was operated by Ernest Bugeforth of that city.

Portland Girl Sails

On the United Fruit liner Metapan, sailing from New York yesterday for Jamaica, Panama and Colombia, was Miss Naomi L. Parchment of Portland, Me.

LOOP WHIP ENDS 3-DAY DOG HUNT

A three-day game of tag on Boston Common and the Public Garden came to an end today when a stray German shepherd dog was captured by the Animal Rescue League after five attempted round-ups.

The league, aided by police on foot and on motorcycles, were "It," with the collarless dog, doing very well on the pursued end of the game until a loop whip ended the chase.

The animal was first called to the attention of the police last Thursday after it had been wandering about the Public Garden two days.

When not molested the animal kept sniffing at automobiles parked in Charles st. as though trying to find the car of its owner.

Friday and yesterday the league made four attempts to trap the dog with the assistance of police. All were failures.

Finally today Archibald MacDonald, of the Animal Rescue League, veteran of countless dog-catching wars, with the aid of a loop whip captured the dog.

It proved docile when captured and seemed rather glad that the chase was over. The League will hold it in an attempt to find the owner.

Gifts of U. S. Stamps Declined by King

London, March 5 (AP)—It was learned today that a large number of American stamps are being sent to King George by American citizens.

That the inconvenience and expense might be saved, the Associated Press was requested to let the American public know that His Majesty does not accept gifts and that, apart from this, the royal collection includes only stamps of the British Empire.

GIRL HELPS IN $350 HOLDUP AT GUNPOINT

Aided by a woman who drove their car, two gunmen got $350 in Dorchester today in a bold daylight holdup of a Westwood st. coal office.

They made a successful getaway.

Joseph Novick, proprietor, and Miss May Saperstein, 23, bookkeeper, were held at gunpoint by one of the thugs while the other rifled the desk of Miss Saperstein and then frisked Novick.

They got $300 from the bookkeeper and $50 from the pockets of Novick.

Novick said a woman dressed in dark clothing sat at the wheel of a coupe outside and opened the door for the holdup men when they fled the office.

He told police the first four numbers on the coupe registration were 1570—.

One of the pair hurled an alarm clock at Novick to intimidate him against pursuit, Novick said. The clock was taken by police fingerprint experts.

Novick described one man as [illegible] to 35 years old, wore a leather jacket and gray cap and had a handkerchief over his face.

The other was 26 to 30 years old and wore a gray overcoat

MAN, WOMAN DYING IN CRASH

Rose Roche, 34, Harrison st., Somerville, and James McBride, .6, of Bow st., Belmont are dying at the Cambridge City Hospital of possible fracture of the skull as result of an automoble crash early today.

The man and woman were brought to the hospital after an automobile in which they were riding crashed into traffic stand in Central square.

DRIVER IS SAVED AS CAR BURNS

Eric Higgins, 26, of Brackett st., Brighton, was saved from death today on Center st., Newton, after his car crashed into a tree and burst into flames.

Boston Massacre Victims Honored

Memory of the victims of the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770, was honored today when Mayor Curley and various societies placed wreaths at the foot of the Crispus Attancks monument on Boston Common.

Negro societies participated. The monument commemorates the Negro leader of the crowd on which British regulars fired on State st., killing three and mortally wounding two others.

Leap Year Day Baby Has Leap Year Dad

Springfield, March 5 (AP)—Twins are said to "run in a family," but Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Marsh, Jr., of this city might well believe that the same holds true of "leap year babies."

A son, it was announced today, was born to them February 29 and brought the further statement that the father also was born on Leap Year day. The father is now on a business trip to the Orient.

FAITHS PLAN A WASHINGTON CONFERENCE

For the first time in America a great conference is to be held in the city of Washington, D. C., March 7 and 9, between Catholics, Protestants and Jews for the purpose of friendly understanding and co-operation. Representatives of the three great faiths will come from all parts of the United States and from Canada. A chief speaker will be Mr. Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, who has long been a friendly link between widely separated groups. He will emphasize the vicious results the world around of religious and racial prejudices. He has no place in his world family for the bigot. President Hoover has also been asked to address the assembly. There are 100 sponsors to this national conference.

Y. M. Catholic Association Retreat

The 57th annual retreat of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston will open in the Church of the Immaculate Conception on East Concord st. and Harrison avenue, Sunday evening, March 13, at 7:45 o'clock. This retreat has been a feature of the work of the association since its inception, and from the small beginning in 1878 has grown to tremendous proportions.

At the first retreat a fair-sized gathering attended, 160 being members of the association, and the others young men of Boston and vicinity who were invited by the association to take part in these exercises. This invitation has been renewed each succeeding year until, at present, both the upper and lower church (St. Valentine's chapel) are filled to overflowing with men from all sections of Greater Boston.

This retreat has been the inspiration for similar retreats given throughout the State during Passion Week. Last year it is estimated that more than 20 such retreats were given in Greater Boston, in which more than 60,000 men took part.

Why Do People Want to Drink?

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher of Tremont Temple will answer tomorrow evening several questions interesting to the public. They are three in number.

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher announced to his congregation last Sunday that there would be two surprises arranged for the morning hour of worship tomorrow. He will take for his sermon topic: "The Three V's of a Victorious Church." The Lord's Supper will be observed and a large number of new members received.

In the evening Dr. Brougher will preach his fifth sermon in the series on "The Seven Sayings of the Saviour on the Cross, namely "An Unquenchable Thirst." He will answer these questions:

1—Why do people want to drink?
2—Does prohibition increase thirst?
3—Is physical suffering a reality?

Catholic Church as Seen by a Protestant

The Rev. Laurence Breed Walker of the Buena Vista Universalist Church, Roxbury, in his regular Wednesday evening lecture, has given his topic as "A Protestant's View of the Roman Catholic Church." He asks that following his lecture there be a discussion "Without Fear or Favor." He invites the public free of charge. Tomorrow morning he will take for his sermon topic "The Church That Is Different."

The Rev. Mr. Walker comes to Boston from Maine, where he frequently addressed audiences of 1200. He is sure he has a message for Greater Boston, and sees possibilities for a finer citizenship and more rapid advance in spiritual living.

Mr. Brooks Returns From Florida Sunday

A great welcome home friendship service will be held at the Dudley St. Baptist Church, Roxbury, tomorrow evening for Pastor Brooks. Dr. Brooks will return from a month's sojourn in Florida as a guest of Mr. John D. Rockefeller. He is tanned by the winds and sun and quite recovered. He will preach upon the subject, "The Way of the Cross."

At the morning service, 10:30 o'clock, Pastor Brooks will preach upon the theme, "With Christ in Lent."

Pastor Brooks is fully recovered from the walking grip which he contracted two weeks before he left Boston and which caused a severe abscess in his inner ear. He was attended all the time while in Florida by two doctors who have discharged him as fully recovered.

Leading Divines at Lorrimor Hall

Dr. Frederick W. Adams of Boston University School of Theology will occupy the pulpit in Lorimer Hall this coming week, noon meetings, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. On Monday noon will come Dean Philemon F. Sturgis and on Friday Rev. Henry McF. B. Ogilby.

Among the musicians who will assist with this noon-day service conducted by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches are: James A. Montgomery, tenor; Graton Drake, tenor; Mrs. Dorothy Richardson, soprano; Choral Art Society; Rudolph Bossardt, baritone,

At Old South

Dr. Archibald T. Davison of Harvard University and one of New England's best known musical directors and leaders, will appear at the Old South Meeting House Forum tomorrow afternoon and talk on Gilbert and Sullivan with illustrations of his theme by students of Harvard and Radcliffe.

PILOT GIRL'S PRIZE

The Extension Magazine for this month, March 1932, announces the final results of the nation-wide Short Story contest conducted under its auspices. In this national competition the judges, selecting from nearly 3000 manuscripts, awarded first prize in the group entitled "Catholic Stories" to the short story, "The House Numbered 19," written by Miss Mabel Farnum, a member of the Pilot staff.

So extensive was the interest inspired by this competition that contributions were submitted from all parts of the country. It is a singular honor to be numbered among the "firsts" in a field so extensive and so warmly contested.

CHURCH BODY LOOKS AT JAPAN

In a pamphlet broadcast among American ministers and churches the Federal Council of Churches has announced "The Christian attitude toward the China-Japan conflict." Among other statements in this remarkable document are four propositions:

First, that, under no circumstances, should the United States resort to war or to any measure of military coercion.

"Second, that strong endorsement should be given to the Stimson policy of refusal to recognize national advantage in violation of treaties.

"Third, that the exportation of arms and munitions to China and Japan be forbidden.

"Fourth, that, if every other measure for the restoration of peace should fail, the United States should, under certain conditions, support a movement for the severance of trade and financial relations with either party to the conflict which resorts to force in violation of its treaty obligations."

Dr. Robert Watson Sees Religion Grow

In his annual report as general secretary of The Lord's Day League, Dr. Robert Watson writes:

"Church attendance is slowly improving. Congregations that have not had prayer meetings for unknown years are meeting during the week for prayer. We are convinced that we are in the midst of a revival of genuine Christianity. Unless the Lord's people refuse to respond, in this, the day of His power, we are soon to see the greatest revival in the history of the church. For this we are praying; for this we are working; for this we are asking the continued co-operation of church people, in their prayers and gifts and service."

Hon C. N. Howard Speaks on Prohibition

The Adventist Temple on the corner of Warren ave. and West Canton st. will be the scene of a prohibition demonstration this afternoon at 3 o'clock when Hon. Clinton N. Howard, "Apostle of Peace and Prohibition," addresses an audience on "Prohibition and the Bible." Those who have heard him on this topic have been amazed at how many arguments can be culled from the Scriptures for the purposes of prohibition.

The doors will be open early and the public is cordially invited.

Y. M. C. A. Observes Lent in Many Ways

Newton C. Fetter, student pastor for the Baptist church is the Morning Watch devotional leader for the week beginning on March 7. He will be heard from radio station WNAC at 7:30 o'clock each weekday morning. The service is broadcast under the auspices of the Boston Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Fred Winslow Adams, Boston University, School of Theology, will lead the Lenten Service of worship to be held by members of the Branch Board and staff of the Huntington ave. Branch, Boston Y. M. C. A. at 316 Huntington ave. on Thursday evening, March 10 at 7 o'clock.

Mr. F. G. Sherrill, member of the Branch Board, is chairman of the committee arranging for this service.

This will be the first of the "Art of Living" series in understanding religion to be conducted during the Lenten period.

This service is open to the members of the Association and their friends.

March has been designated as Friendship Month, by the Caspy Club of the Huntington ave. Branch, Boston Y. M. C. A. During this month an intensive effort will be made by this Club to increase its membership among the young men and woman of Boston. At the present time there are over 150 members in this young peoples club which meets each Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, 316 Huntington ave., Boston.

Musical Treat at Boston Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Edward A. Granstein, contralto, and Miss Hope Wright, violinist, are the artists for the weekly Sunday afternoon musicale to be held tomorrow at the Boston Y. W. C. A. activities center, 140 Clarendon st.

Tea will be served informally following the musical hour, which is open to the public. The hour is 4 o'clock. The popular series of music is sponsored by the Adult Education Department of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association.

Youth Faces the Twentieth Century

At the Boston Y. W. C. A. on Thursdays during March vital questions will be presented under the general theme: "Youth Faces the Twentieth Century." Leaders whose experiences particularly enable them to discuss the definite subjects will address the young people who are in their twenties. The five talks are free. The special interests to be considered are:

Youth Faces Religion—March 3; Youth Faces the Home—March 10; Youth Faces Industry—March 17; Youth Faces the Race Question—March 24; Youth Faces the World—February 1.

ASSAULT ON STANDARDS

On Saturday afternoon, March 5, members of the League of Catholic Women will assemble to listen to the seventh lecture in the series of 1932 on outstanding public questions of the day. This afternoon's topic will be "The Assault on Christian Standards." The lecturer is Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of sociology at Boston College.

Bernard Shaw Play

A second Bernard Shaw play will be given in Boston next week. It is to be that old favorite, "You Never Can Tell" (amusing melange of feminism, a dentist's office and an ironic waiter who at all crucial moments proffers cheese to those at table) and it will be given for one night only next Friday by the Peabody Players at their charming little theater in the Elizabeth Peabody Settlement House on Charles st.

Miss Rubin

Greetings today come from Mrs. Eva Whiting White, general secretary and director of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, and head worker of Elizabeth Peabody House.

Hope For Coming Age

YOUTH faces life with a clean slate prepared to carry on. Each generation is meant to make a contribution of its own on the background of all that has gone before.

During the last fifteen years two of the greatest ethical codes have been formulated—namely, the possibility of peace among the nations of the world, and a concept of industrial democracy. For our children, certainly we desire the idealism of the home. The President's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership proves that the American mind is thoroughly aroused against congested areas in cities and bad housing in rural districts. We mean to have the habitat of the future a fitting shelter for children. More fundamental than the house is the home. Any one who has mingled freely with those who are between eighteen and twenty-three years of age during the last ten years finds that the cynicism which was dominant a while ago is giving way to a faith and a conservatism which means family stability. Youth is coming through. The home will stand the test.

Mrs. E. W. White

In the economic field, young and old are turning to those austere virtues of thrift and disciplined effort which alone can win through the present economic crisis, while the younger economists and workers—almost to a man—are demanding safeguards to mitigate the suffering caused by business depressions. It stands to reason that the human mind that has evolved our industrial system must be able to find a way of controlling its worst aspects. Again—we turn to Youth.

Undoubtedly the shorter working week and working day is to become a reality. Leisure puts a premium on sports, the out-of-door life, and more important still, on the free time to take advantage of the heritage of literature, music, the drama, the visual arts—to say nothing of the opportunity for extra civic participation.

World Unity—a hope for the future which every sane person must accept. The ultimate accomplishment of this end rests upon the insight with which our coming generations see that world unity begins at one's own doorstep and works upward from everyday affairs. Ever more—on the older members of the community rests the responsibility for either the slow attainment of better conditions or for the rapid accomplishment of desirable ends.

The present challenges to our economic well-being are great. It is necessary that many activities be curtailed and added duties assumed. In the curtailment, however, two fields must be safeguarded — education and recreation. Our children must not be stunted mentally or physically. Hardships can be withstood if social aims and ideals are upheld, because Youth is resilient. One great by-product of present bewilderment and distress may be a more clear insight into those real values on which well-being rests.

A message next week will be by Mr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

WE WENT TO LUNCH WITH THE LADIES AND GENTLEMEN of the press yesterday to meet Conrad Nagel, guest of honor, and we don't have to tell you who HE is, do we?

Rosamond Blanchard

That charming gentleman, Mr. Victor J. Morris, manager of Loew's Orpheum, gave this good-will luncheon at the Cocoanut Grove to welcome Mr. Nagel and the petite partner in his act, Miss Ruth Marsh, to Boston. And were we Thrilled? Years ago—although to look at him it is hard to believe it IS that long—we fell in love with Conrad Nagel and we decided yesterday when we met him that we have never completely fallen OUT.

He is even handsomer off the stage than on with a marvelous tan, clear blue eyes and that wistful, romantic expression that simply made us forget our delicious lunch. When we shook hands and chatted for a minute we felt we had known him all our life. He gave a most interesting talk about the movie industry in Hollywood, emphasizing a few points which WE have always wanted to take the soap box about; i. e., reviews and reviewers of plays and cinemas.

He deplored the wise-cracking critic who kills a play by trying to be clever and facetious—you know the kind who says "the women drenched the curtain with tears and the men went to sleep," stuff like that terribly exaggerated. Even worse, WE think, are the types who have had hardening of the heartstrings so long that everything romantic is "sloppy sentimentalism."

A Little Advice to Critics

WE THINK A CRITIC SHOULD FEEL HE IS A SORT of guide to the public as well as a salesman for the producer of plays and movies—like a ballyhoo man on a sightseeing bus. Faneuil Hall may be a flop as to architecture, and just another brick building to the barker, but to the visitor in the town it is The Cradle of Liberty and he doesn't care a hoot what the bus man thinks about it. Just so, a magnificent edifice may be just an office building of a popular tea merchant, but if it is a masterpiece of skill and beauty at the same time, the ballyhoo man should tell both sides of the story if he wishes to interest his crowd.

A Dramatic Guide

SO THE CRITIC SHOULD realize that the public has a few dollars or cents to spend for an evening of pleasure and they have the right to expect a dramatic guide to be fair, calm and understanding in his comments.

• • •

MR. NAGEL WAS SO SINCERE in his subject and spoke in such clear, pleasing tones, he made a deep impression on us. His partner, Miss Marsh, was a dear little brunette, with a darling smile.

A Suggestion

THERE IS HARDLY A WEEK goes by now that we do not meet a celebrity or two—we are beginning to feel most terribly important. You know we met Tom Powers last week, and made a little confession for which we blushed when we read it the next morning, but we blushed still more when we received a telegram from T. P. himself suggesting that we "obey that impulse" the NEXT time. Funny how some people will take a society column SERIOUSLY, no matter how flippant we try to be!

Cheers Veterans

TOM HAS BEEN DOING A little boy scout work in monologues at the Soldiers' Home with my dear friend, Mrs. Curtis Guild. She confided that she was charmed with Mr. Powers also and SHE is so experienced.

English Union to Hold Tea

Mrs. James A. Parker and Mrs. George S. West will be hostesses at the regular monthly tea of the English Speaking Union on Tuesday, March 8, at 4 o'clock.

The guest of honor is to be Rear-Admiral William S. Sims, and the pourers will be Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley, Mrs. John Homans, Mrs. Frederick Hood, Mrs. Henry A. Laughlin, Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman and Mrs. Henry A. Murray.

Dr. John W. Bartol and Mr. Hamilton Osgood, 2d, are to speak at 4 o'clock promptly, on the subject of the Boston British Apprentice Club. This club is one of the chief activities of the Boston branch of the English Speaking Union, for the purpose of offering hospitality to the officers and apprentices of the British Merchant Marine while in the port of Boston.

Edwards' Home Sold

WE HEAR THAT THE LATE Gen. Edwards' place, "Dunroven," in Dedham has been sold, for a perfect song, too. What good times will be remembered there and we hope the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Lee, will enjoy it as much as our late friend did.

Wed in Nassau

HAVING TO CALL UP ROSAMOND BLANCHARD on a little literary matter last night, we learned that her uncle, Col. Harold Blanchard, was married two days ago in Nassau. As this is the colonel's first marriage and the young lady's also, who by the way is a Miss Briggs of Dedham, but we can't tell you more at this time, it looks as though a tropical moon was as potent as when WE were down there two years ago.

Dinner Party

Barbara Bremer

MRS. J. LEWIS BREMER, perpetual youth we call her is giving a dinner party on Tuesday night for her daughter, Miss Barbara, a postdebutante. The young group will go on to the theater afterward, probably the Scandals we should imagine. Barbara Bremer would be much more attractive if she would smile more spontaneously, we think.

Recital Sponsors

THE JUBILEE SINGERS ARE coming to town on the 13th to aid the Utica Normal and Industrial Institute. They will sing in Repertory Hall and the sponsors are Mrs. N. P. Hallowell, Mrs. Robert Hallowell, Mrs. John W. Bartol, Mrs. George Lyman Davis, Miss Alice Tapley, Mrs. John S. Moors and others, which insures the evening's success.

Party for Police Head

Capt. Joseph H. Seaver, of the Newton police, who departs with Mrs. Seaver today on a trip to the West Indies, was given a farewell reception in his office by fellow members of the police headquarters staff.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

—By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE—

Books on Russia continue to appear with the regularity of commuters' trains. Everyone who takes the briefest peep at that country comes right home and writes a volume of impressions.

But Alice Withrow Field remained two years with the Soviet government and made a careful survey of one subject that of "Protection of Women and Children in Soviet Russia" (Dutton) and has written a careful report of what she discovered. She found that everything possible was being done for them, and there is not the slightest doubt that we could emulate the example set for us.

If the next generation and the generation after that is to "carry on," there can be little argument that they should be given every opportunity to be fitted for their task.

"It is necessary," says Mrs. Field, "for the woman who lives at home and manages that home, that she have reliable groups of people to mine the coal she burns, weave the cloth she wears and butcher the meat she cooks. I do not think that anyone can honestly say that the purpose of the State institutions for the care of children is an attempt to undermine home life if home life is considered as a factor in individual social development and not as the degrading form of bondage which it is sometimes considered."

And again: "In spite of all the popular talk about mass this and mass that, orthodox Communism strives for efficiency and individuality in the lives of all people. This applies to workers in the home, as well as those who concern themselves with other occupations."

Much is said of social insurance and old-age pensions; and there are charts to prove the points which Mrs. Field makes. Instead of doles and increased taxes, other governments might take heed of what is going on in Russia at this time. Of conditions here, for instance, Mrs. Field has discovered "that even in some of the department stores in New York City, which are supposed to have the most modern and humane treatment of employes, once a woman has had a child, she definitely loses her position.

"In most states in the United States married women are not allowed to teach in the schools, the ostensible reason being that they might take jobs away from younger people whose need might be greater, but this is hardly logical in view of the fact that no board of education discriminates against widows and married men."

You will find much to think about in this informative book.

Eleanor Risley, who wrote that charming little volume, "The Road to Wildcat," comes forward with a second book with the delightful title of "An Abandoned Orchard." (Little, Brown.) A widow, she inherited many acres of trees in the Ozark country, "whose people were hostile and remote." She had her definite troubles from the very beginning, and yet she tells of them with laughter, and her adventures read like a novel. A rare courage sweeps through this narrative, and there is a glamor over it all, much like that we discovered years ago in "Adventures in Contentment."

Mrs. Risley, after recording all the trials and tribulations she went through in striving to make her orchard pay, ends on this optimistic note:

"Years ago I sought here the blessing of solitude. Now I have found that solitude is an empty word. I tremble with my serried trees at the mystery of the dawn breeze, and with them watch in solemn adoration the setting sun, or shudder with them as they sway to the fury of the north wind. Perhaps, after all, life is good."

A fine, mellow book, exquisitely written.

Louis Untermeyer, who gave us those fine translations of the songs of Heine and many excellent anthologies, comes to us again as a poet in a slender volume called "Food and Drink." (Harcourt, Brace.) Some curious drawings by George Plank illuminate the verses.

The poet captures beauty on every page. His is an authentic voice, and he can give us a picture within the confines of a sonnet, making words as eloquent as any artist's brush. Take this, for instance, which he calls "Kansas Winter Prairie":

Here, where each mile repeats another mile,
Distance is all. Distance has overthrown
Contour and curve that put shapes of their own
On spaciousness and save it from exile.
Here, in half-hearted effort at denial,
Earth pushes up or slackened sky lets down
A blotch of farms, three naked tanks, a town,
Too listless to attempt a second trial.
Distance is all. Ripeness has come and gone,
Leaving the earth gashed over and stripped bare,
The sweet loam soured, and the fertile air
Used up, having done all that death has done;
So that eternity, man's endless trouble,
Can stretch itself in these dead seas of stubble.

The great poets of tomorrow may be sitting today in our public schools. Nellie B. Sergent has gathered together the verses written by children of high-school age; and her anthology, "Younger Poets," (Appleton) is a remarkable collection. Every state in the Union is represented, and there are biographical notes at the end concerning each versifier.

Not all the poems are bits of perfection; but once in a while there is a fancy expressed that reveals the true poetic spirit and fire. A little girl in Oklahoma, for instance, wrote this simple tribute to Robert Frost:

As simple and as deep
As a mountain river—
Young as Spring
And as old as Winter,
A primrose would be
More fitting than a medal
For you.

Ubangi King Buys Suit at Morse's

King Garabaldi of the Ubangi tribe of the French Congo South Africa came to Leopold Morse Co. today for his first suit of clothes. The king, who is six feet four inches tall, was waited on by H. D. Ross, manager of Morse's Adams sq. store.

The king is in Boston on a world's tour, accompanied by 12 of the women in his tribe. The Ubangi women wear large wooden discs in both upper and lower lips. They are showing in a local theater.

Rudy Vallee May Buy California Home

Santa Monica, Cal., March 5 (INS)—Southern California may claim Rudy Vallee, the crooning orchestra leader, for its own.

His father-in-law, Chief of Police C. E. Webb of Santa Monica, revealed today that Vallee had practically closed a deal for purchase of a $60,000 Spanish type home on two acres of ground in Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Warren in Bridge Talk

Mrs. Prescott Warren will speak at the bridge party to be given at the Hotel Somerset next Saturday afternoon, March 12, by the Quota Club of Boston, in aid of their girls' service work. Mrs. Warren's talk is scheduled for 2:15 and her topic will be "How to Run a Bridge Party."

In Receiving Line

Among those receiving with Miss Marion L. Godfrey, the club president, will be Miss Julia Dickson, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, Mrs. F. B. Ames, Mrs. Ernest Cobb, Miss Bertha Goldthwaite, Miss Marian Midgley, Miss Myrtle Dickson, Miss Marian E. Wrayton and Miss Mary Caroline Crawford.

As an additional means of raising money at this bridge party, candy and cake will be sold under the direction of Miss Daisy Treen. Dr. Marjorie M. Johnson, chairman of the committee on prizes, promises a number of attractive trophies for successful players.

The immediate contribution of the club this winter, to the unemployment situation as it affects women, has been to pay for the services of a field worker at the girl's service and information center which has been maintained at 87 Beacon st.

Hundred Girls Helped

No other agency in the city, it was found, was meeting the need for just this kind of help, which was outside the scope of the laws governing juveniles and had particularly to do with ou-of-work girls who, for the most part were without family connections.

Up to last month more than 100 girls had been helped, ranging from the girl who had not eaten for two days to the college graduate who had been out of work for two years.

Mrs. Scranton in Charge

The first of the four monthly teas to be given by the Judge Baker Foundation for the members of social agencies of Boston, will be held on Tuesday, March 8 from 4 to 5:30 at 38½ Beacon st. Mrs. Gilmore G. Scranton is in charge, assisted by Mrs. William Stanley Parker, Mrs. Reeve Chipman, Mrs. William A. Muller and Mrs. James Tucker Cutler, all of whom will pour at the tea table. Other assistants will include Mrs. Winslow Blanchard, Mrs. George Olmstead, Mrs. John Harris Ward, Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Jr., Mrs. Charles K. Cobb, Jr., Mrs. Henry Minot and Mrs. Alexander Macomber.

Society Notes

THE ANNUAL OPEN HOUSE at the Boston Industrial Home, 17 Davis st., will be held Wednesday, March 9, from 3 to 5:30 o'clock. The Junior League girls who will assist at the tea are the Misses Catharine Blake, Eleanor Jones, Hulda Lang, Prudence Jones, Emily Perkins and Lydia Evans.

MR. RICHARDSON WHITE will have an exhibition of some of his work from March 8 through the 18th at the Junior League gallery at Zero Marlborough st. Among Mr. White's figures of horses is Miss Crompton, which is lent by Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox of Cohasset.

REAL VOICE OF RADIO AND A VOICE VERY DRY

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

I THINK THAT I HAVE at last heard the authentic voice of the radio, and will the admirers of our more popular vocalists please not raise their hands. I heard the radio speak as a savage might hear it, who had never known that radio existed and suddenly found the air clamorous with cries for help in his own tongue. It happened in the middle of a program which was coming into the room only because I was too lazy to get out of bed and turn the thing off. A popular tune, like fifty other popular tunes, had just ended and certain that it would be followed by an announcement in praise of horse-feathers in the new cellophane wrapper, I had made myself temporarily deaf, so that I missed the first few words of the announcement and, startled into consciousness by the familiar name of Charles A. Lindbergh, so heard of the kidnaping of the child.

"In the Midst of Death—"

The shock of the event was multiplied a hundred times by this sudden interruption of life in the midst of the radio's death. The radio recovered itself, the dance program went on, sounding more tinkling and empty even than before. But because I could not bear to think steadily of the event, I kept on thinking of the way the event had been made known and thought that the radio might make itself infinitely more absorbing if it allowed itself from time to time not merely to give news, which of course it does, but to give some sense of the actuality of life, instead of always trying to entertain us to draw us away from actuality.

A Good Man Gone

In spite of the reference to my youth in the following letter, I am really old enough to know better. I ought to know that the suggestion that drinking may be a pleasure is an improper one in these times. And I am particularly happy to publish the communication from Jenny A. Strand, of Chicago, because I have something unpleasant to say about the wets for a change.

"'Another good man gone wrong,'" she says. "It is to laugh—you criticize and rail against the 'grim, lonely non-drinker who is a menace,' etc., as if anybody could look grimmer or utter more unhealthy, untrue statements than you do in this article! If drinking makes you so pleasant, I'd suggest that you have another picture head the column, for your looks belie your words.

Plain Liars, All

"The article is the worst drivel I've read for a long time, and there is a sea of it, all issued by wet propagandists, who have no more regard for the truth than a Hottentot. They will drown in the sea of their own lies soon. I'm surprised that a man of your youth and might-be intelligence can send out such a mess of untruths. If it weren't that some unintelligent people take you seriously it would be to laugh, because you look as though you dared, and double-dared anyone to tell you different! And I couldn't resist the temptation.

"Be Advanced!"

"Get up to date—the advanced thinkers—really advanced—are the 'drys.' Intoxicating liquor is as old as sin, and I'd hate to think I hadn't progressed one iota in my ideas—that I couldn't see the menace, in these days of high speed living, of a narcotic that drugs a man's mind and body and renders him unfit to be a member of present day society. You 'wets' are all old 'hangovers'—and you give all thinking people a severe headache. Get up to date!"

Good Cause—Bad Tactics

Hottentot though I may be, I have some respect for decency of human action which has always made me despise the methods of the Anti-Saloon League, and which makes me regret that the wets should now adopt the very worst of its tactics. Speaking of the resolution which will come up on March 14 in the House, Mr. Henry H. Curran, one of our most distinguished anti-prohibitionists, says, "We shall be at work from now until election day in every Congressional district . . . to help elect those who support the . . . resolution and help defeat those who do not."

I dislike the Wayne-Wheeler touch, even when it is used for the destruction of Wayne-Wheelerism. The only redeeming circumstance is that Mr. Curran is less powerful than the Anti-Saloon League, and his threat is therefore less important.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

To a Girl About Town

It must be fun to column, and get
'round to all the places,
And hear so many raconteurs, and see so many faces,
And get the [illegible] lowdown on all the plottings and duplicities,
And be told of hidden kindnesses and curious eccentricities—
Then, totalling your findings, eventually know
It all occurred in Nineveh some centuries ago.

—M. C. G.

Short Story

"Well," said one street-corner-stander to another, "last night I was thrown out of the Blank Cafe and told to stay out."

"What's the matter," queried his fellow building-holder-up, "doesn't the boss like you?"

Lady Peel Worries Not!

When George Bernard Shaw signs contracts with producers to produce his plays there's a clause that none of his words or lines are to be changed . . . We understand that Beatrice Lillie is having some fun with her lines in the current Shaw play, "Too True to Be Good" . . . By that we mean, that whenever the spirit moves, the grand Bee she inserts certain expressions of her own—which are received in delightful fashion by the audience . . . Lady Peel doesn't care about it one way or the other, we've been told, and it wouldn't surprise us a bit if since many messages have been going back and forth across the waters, that smart comedienne, Bee, is due for a Shawian spanking . . . And we hope when it happens she'll chirp up, as only Lillie can, "Puleaze!"

Snooping About

Former Hubman Abe Sperber, now New Yorktowning, is noted for his hosting to visiting friends from Beantown . . . In fact, a day rarely passes that he's not taking people places—and does he know THE places! . . . Have you ever noticed how fussy Dan Neusbaum is that his white carnation is "just so" in his coat lapel? . . . The Boys-About-Places are resenting Sammy Habelow having "New England's Finest Drummer" painted on all of his drum cases . . . Meow! . . . And now Swampscott's Johnny Nies claims that we're wrong about his brother Ray being the best golfer . . . Well, Johnny, how about staging a match for us when Ray returns from his links trekking in Europe? . . . Don't think that "Polly of the Circus," now at Loew's State, is any old-fashioned Pollyanna picture . . . It's right up to date with wisecracks, fun and pep . . . They haven't forgotten about Clark Gable's S. A. . . . and Marion Davies is plenty cute! ! . . . Better see it soon before something is done about censoring some of those swell lines.

Latest Rumor:

Native booker was telling us about a girl he's managing. "She's headed for Broadway," he enthused.

About Towning

Mrs. Tedy Roy looks so grrand in her pince-nez! . . . And now we're told that the reason H. Lake does not do things to entertain when she's called on in the clubs is because she is that frightened in the spotlight . . . Really! . . . Did we ever tell you that the voice of "The Globe Trotter" is the voice of "N. F. T." (our radio chatman) and of Newcomb Thompson, too? . . . Travelman Irving Hedtler once took a vacation from travel planning by going traveling—to South America . . . When his cruising ship arrived at Willemstad, he didn't go sightseeing with the rest of his friends but sat on a fence, swinging his feet all day and watching the huge bridges there go up and down, as if by magic! . . . He ought to get a great kick out of sitting on a fence out at Kenmore sq., don't you think? . . . Jean Harlow has a curl clipped from her head when she was a baby and if you doubt her platinum locks are strictly on the up and up she produces it and waves it at you, to your confusion . . . John R. Tunis' "Whirlwind on Skates" story in the March Cosmopolitan is all about clever Hockeyman George Owen—the boy who wouldn't marry the boss' daughter! . . .

What a Voice!

You're going to be spellbound with delight over Conrad Nagel's voice when you see him at the Orpheum this week . . . We've never seen newspaper folks so attentive, eager and really happy while listening to a moving picture star speeching until we snooped on it all, during Vic Morris' luncheon for Mr. Nagel at the Cocoanut Grove yesterday noon . . . It is very easy to believe why he has the title of "The Mouth Piece of Hollywood"—he's that brilliant . . . KNOWS the moving picture field from all angles, it's plain to be seen from just listening to him

Flora Collins Recital

Flora Collins, American mezzo soprano, will give a recital at Jordon Hall, on Tuesday evening, March 15. Miss Collins is a Schubert Memorial prize winner of 1930 and has appeared as guest soloist with the Philharmonic Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. Her concert at Jordan Hall will mark her first appearance in Boston.

DRAMA DISCUSSED By Nicholas Young

Few Hits, No Runs, Some Errors

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Events in the theater, even though happy in themselves, often give rise to deep misgivings. As an example, you might turn attention to the current attempt to make Boston a one-week stand. Gone are the days, apparently, when a "Lightnin'" could run up 23 weeks of lively local interest, or an "Under Cover" exceeding that with 27 persisting weeks. With this season has come a total eclipse of what we once proudly referred to as "runs."

* * *

There is reason enough, to be sure. Inadequate entertainment on one side and public apathy on the other have made heavy inroads upon theater-going. Whereupon was devised the one-week plan for Boston and some other locations on the map of America where extended runs were both the rule and hope of producers. Mr. Carroll and his "Vanities" surprised everybody by engaging the Colonial for a single week. It proved a prosperous speculation, for there was a great clamoring among the faithful to give full support to Mr. Carroll's art treasures. Had this revue remained a second week it might have turned the Colonial foyers into nightly congregations of Bedlam—but we doubt it. As it turned out, two weeks of good business was compressed into one, and Mr. Carroll left town with peace in his heart and coin in his pocket.

Having so nicely set up for himself the one-week stand idea for this metropolitan area, it was only natural that Mr. Carroll's conduct would encourage emulation. It did—and with his old friend, George White, whose "Scandals" move into the Boston Opera House on Monday for the newly utilized and extremely limited period of six days. It is reported on excellent authority that this is the first time in theater annals—the very first—that Mons. White has ever paid the slightest attention to, or accepted a suggestion from the astute Mons. Carroll. In any event, if you have gnawing desire to see "Scandals" your arrangements must be made within the next six days.

Even the sturdy old Drama itself has been nipped by the germ. The thing certainly is catching. Lenore Ulric, venturesome heroine of "The Social Register," will reopen the Tremont on Monday—for one week. Not even the oldest inhabitant can remember when the playful comedies of the theater remained less than two weeks: usually it was a matter of four, six and sometimes sixteen. But the distress, if you must call it that, is not strictly local. Mr. Arch Selwyn, Broadway producer, sets it off in a brochure prepared for the eager press by Prof. Al Spink. Chiefly, it concerns the appearance here at the Colonial on March 28 of Ben Levy's "The Devil Passes." And for one week only. If Mr. Selwyn, tuning in on the prevailing spirit, has cut Boston down to one week, just see what he has done to those other great centers of dramatic art! He has made split weeks, so-called, of Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati—three days each, no more, no less. Only Boston and Chicago draw the full week.

While all this is going on, Blanche Yurka continues her devotions to Mr. Ibsen. Having spent an unhappy week with "The Wild Duck" at the Hollis, Miss Yurka proposes now to enter the lists with "Hedda Gabler." Miss Yurka's professional sorrows must be of her own choosing, as she takes the Hollis stage in the triple capacity of producer, director and star. There are no easy roles in Ibsen. Miss Yurka selects some of the greatest and gives them ennobled performances.

HOME FIRES OF DRAMA STILL AGLOW WITH FROLIC AND MUSIC

INFLEXIBLE

'Our Gang' Lad on the Stage

In keeping with its policy of presenting motion picture actors in person, the Bowdoin Square Theater will introduce to the Boston public on Monday, Sunshine Sammy, former star of the "Our Gang" comedies. With Sunshine Sammy will be his two little brothers, Joe and Charlie. The sketch they will offer is "Dancing As You Like It."

Week's Bills

Included in the cast are Eugene and Willie Howard, Rudy Vallee, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, the Gale Quadruplets, Barbara Blair and Ethel Barrymore Colt. Settings by Joseph Urban.

TREMONT—(Opening Monday) "The Social Register," a comedy by John Emerson and Anita Loos. Revealing the adventures of a chorus girl in Park ave. society. Included in the cast are Lenore Ulric, Teresa Maxwell Conover, Cesar Romero, Hans Hansen, Wilfred Clarke, Oswald Yorke and Donald Stewart.

COPLEY—(Opening Monday) "Your Uncle Dudley," a comedy by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson. The story of a bachelor uncle in a typical American family. Included in the cast are Aldrich Bowker, Helen Ray, Amy Loomis, Joseph Cotten, Frank Compton and John Lucas.

COLONIAL—(Second week.) Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good." Mr. Shaw once more takes up the business of smashing popular idols. The last week.

ORNAMENTAL

Stars by Their Wooing Prove "Strangers in Love" May Wed

By HARRIS MORGAN

Fredric March, able mimer generally, did so well with his dual role in "Dr Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," that his next has him doing the double stunt, this time as twin brothers. Easier, of course, on the make-up and the art, than the stirring Stevenson story, but interesting just the same, through the work chiefly of the star and the equally clever Kay Francis.

For him was taken the plot of "The Shorn Lamb," the William J. Locke tale, which deals with a black sheep who comes home after his roving, to find his brother has turned crook. Confronted, the brother drops dead. In the old home the ne'er-do-well doffs the dead man's clothes and passes muster. He gets into complications, amusing and serious as well in his false position. His brother's sweetheart, a golddigger, is fooled, and her endearments arouse the jealousy of Miss Francis, cast as the secretary with whom the newcomer is falling in love.

"Strangers in Love" is a good romantic comedy, holding the attention and furnishing sufficient laughs. It is nicely directed by Lothar Mendes, and is superbly mounted by Paramount. The acting honors go to the two principals, and to Stuart Erwin.

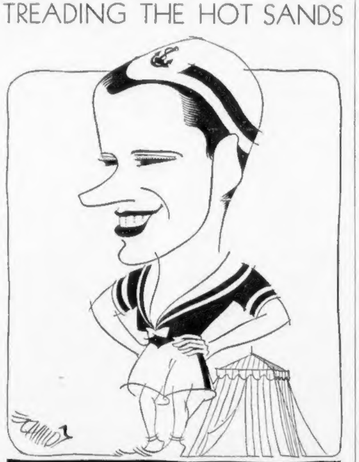
On stage the Metropolitan continues to interest you with a bright and colorful footlight revue, "Co-Eds," very good entertainment. Ranny Weeks again sings, and goes over strong; and Mr. Sevitzky guides his excellent orchestra in such manner as to bring tremendous applause. Other Met features are also on show, all of them good.

TREADING THE HOT SANDS



Beatrice Lillie, whose quaint drolleries add greatly to Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good" at the Colonial. Miss Lillie is revealed as she looked to Staff Artist Charles Schmidt.

Bright Gleams the Big Star

Every now and then some commentator on the theater comes along with a statement to the effect that the day of the "star" is over, and just as often some "star" comes along and proves that the learned commentator is wrong.

In this connection the case of Lenore Ulric is worth looking into. Miss Ulric's salary is of proportions that may well give a theatrical manager pause, and yet she has proved time and again that whatever her salary she is worth it, and that she has unmistakably what is known in theatrical parlance as a "draw." She is proving it once again with her current vehicle, "The Social Register," which comes to the Tremont on Monday evening.

It is always difficult to say whether it is the star or the play which draws audiences. There is, however, one conclusive bit of evidence pointing to Miss Ulric's popularity. That is the success of "The Social Register," in its five weeks on tour prior to opening in New York, when audiences in the various cities in which the piece tried out knew nothing about the play because it was new. They could only be drawn to the playhouse by the lure of Lenore Ulric.

McCormack Recital in Symphony Hall March 20

John McCormack will give a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 20, at 3:30. The great Irish tenor has devoted this season to an extensive tour of America, appearing in many Western cities with great success. His coming Boston recital will be his second and last of the season here.

Stork Scores 6 in 2 Visits

When George White raises the curtain on his 11th and newest edition of his popular series of "Scandals" at the Boston Opera House next Monday evening, Boston playgoers will see six sisters in the same production. They are the Gale quadruplets, the only foursome in the American "legit" theater, and the Loomis Sisters, 16-year-old twins. The Gales, Joan, Jane, June and Jean, made their bow on Broadway in George White's musical comedy success, "Flying High," but the Loomis Sisters have never before appeared in a Broadway show.

The Loomis Twins were born in Kansas City and came to the theater by a strange meeting. Their mother had taken them on a shopping tour when they were but five years old and the proprietor of a local lingerie shop was regaled by their harmonizing when the manager of a next door playhouse chanced to walk in. He listened to the youngsters sing and was so enthralled he asked their mother if she would consent to allow them to appear on the vaudeville bill the next day to fill a spot vacated by a cancelled act. The mother accepted the engagement on behalf of the girls and they scored an overnight triumph.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety screen show will feature Lew Ayres in "Heaven On Earth" and "Fanny Foley Herself," with Edna May Oliver. Five vaudeville acts are also included on the bill.

Harleigh Schultz REVIEWS FILMS

Screen Like Life Itself at State

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Marion Davies adds another to her perfect characterizations. Her Polly in the feature picture at Loew's State this week is an outstanding performance of the year. Added to this is the sterling work of Clark Gable, and of Alfred Santell, whose direction of "Polly of the Circus" is masterly from every angle. Classy acting by principals and minor players, the magic play of camera to be[illegible] a rare realism, and a generally superior production, make this photoplay a notable success.

Based on the Margaret Mayo drama, "Polly of the Circus" has all the essentials for good cinema Romance and comedy are its high lights: a rich story to hold the interest all the way, thrilling sequences to excite diverting dialogue, all these make for keen enjoyment of a picture that every member of the family can see and be delighted with. Polly is a circus lady, a daredevil on the trapeze, a stunter under the big top. Miss Davies makes her live and breathe. Mr. Santell quickly puts you at home on this circus train. Miss Davies ensnares you further about the time the train is pulling into the small town where Mr. Gable is a preacher.

A fall from her high perch, an injury, and Miss Davies is under the pastor's roof, for medical attention. Then the real story begins: host and temporarily invalided guest are drawn together, complications develop — small town ideas and ideals, gossip, loss of the church, then the return to the circus—toward the close, the heroine's determination to drop into eternity, his arrival in the nick of time, then happiness.

No brief telling of the narrative can bring out the smartness of Santell's touch, his speeding of scenes, smoothly flowing, the one into the other; the imaginative handling of his lenses, his marvelous atmosphere of circus life, his method of holding you taut by the amazing way he pictures these high-in-air performers. Nor suggest the brightness of wit that brings laugh after laugh, comedy of the best type, compelling and satisfying. Here the art of Miss Davies, best of all the screen's light comediennes, finds itself at home: by voice and gesture she brings out all the humor.

But the role is much more serious than most of hers of the past; yet she meets every requirement of this difficult part. She is tender, she is gay. The pathos of her becomes very poignant indeed; she is the superb actress always. One is struck by the gradual transformation of her Polly before, and after, love enters: the Polly of the early days is metamorphosed into a new kind of Polly through the stress of soul that comes in with her romance. It is a perfect characterization, through and through.

"Polly of the Circus" has Clark Gable at his best too. He is a thoroughly human clergyman, one of the best we have seen on screen. All his admirers will like him in this role, and they cannot but be pleased with this new show of his versatile art.

For Miss Davies, Mr. Gable and Mr. Santell, the photoplay is a triumph, a striking stretch of realism, diverting often, and frequently gripping, always entertaining.

"King" Sparing on the "Eats"

Paul Whiteman, who is appearing this week with his band at the RKO Keith-Boston, sleeps but four hours a night. He insists that this amount of sleep is sufficient for a mature person in good health.

The "King" arises every morning at 6.30; takes a swim in an indoor pool; exercises for 20 minutes in a gymnasium, and then eats his breakfast of a double order of grapefruit juice, a double order of thin, unbuttered toast, and two cups of black coffee.

He lunches on a glass of tomato juice, thin, unbuttered toast, and green vegetables such as spinach, broccoli, and so on.

For dinner he has grapefruit served in halves on lettuce leaves, perhaps a broiled lean chop, a bit of cabbage or other green, a piece of fruit for dessert, and a demi-tasse.

'Road to Life'

An unusually interesting film will come to the Fine Arts Theatre Monday. It is the first Soviet sound film, and is called "The Road to Life."

It tells the story of the waifs of Russia who were orphaned by war and famine, and roamed the land in lawless bands, getting food and shelter by any means they could. They were given back their old rags and tattered sheepskins for the opening scenes.

'THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME' TO BE PRODUCED

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, March 5—Ernest Schoedsack and Meriam Cooper, travelers, film experts and producers of the never-to-be-forgotten "Chang," are together again. Their reunion takes place at Radio Studios where they combine to produce "The Most Dangerous Game," famous short story.

Perhaps you've read "The Most Dangerous Game," voted the ninth best story in the entire world by one of the magazines, and included in every anthology of best short stories. Unlike "Chang," "Grass" and the rest, it will be made right within the Radio Studios, and it's the first of a series to be produced by Schoedsack and Cooper.

In these days of hard time talk it's worth while to note that "Chang" only cost $100,000 but that it grossed well over $2,000,000. You see, it isn't always the costly pictures that do good business.

New Film for Love

If all the actors had as easy a time after they started free-lancing as Edmund Lowe, they wouldn't have to worry. I know four companies that were trying to sign up the erstwhile Fox favorite. Columbia finally turned the trick. Eddie will be starred in "Revolt," based on the life of William Fallon, and written by Jo Swerling. Irving Cummings will direct. This, we are told, in no way conflicts with "The Great Mouthpiece," written by Gene Fowler. I wonder how Bill Fallon will figure as a character on the screen? In New York he was well known. Gene Fowler's book makes him picturesque if not exactly what one expects of one's lawyer.

Horror 'Drammer' in Color

Lionel Atwill

The Lionel Atwills were all packed up ready to leave for New York and the stage when a call came from Warner Brothers. Mr. Atwill was being paged for the title role of Dr. X" which goes into immediate production. I am very glad Mr. Atwill decided to stay in Hollywood and play "Dr. X" at Warner Brothers. Lionel needs more than one picture to establish him with fans of the West. He is already well known in the East where he has a large following as a stage actor, but he has still to make himself known on the screen. Michael Curtiz directs "Dr. X" and it's to be 100 per cent technicolor, the first horror drama to be done in color. George Rosenor is now adapting the story from a play by Howard Comstock and Allen C. Miller.

New Roles for Peggy

The red-headed Shannon girl who had just a brief but glorious career at Paramount is doing mighty well at the Fox studios. The bosses there are not making the mistake of billing her as a Clara Bow substitute. Peggy will be herself and as such she ought to be heard from this coming year. After she finishes "Society Girl" she will have the lead in "After the Rain," a play by Aubrey C. Kennedy. 'Tis the tale of a girl who married a sailor and goes to the South Seas. He dies and she is left in the tropical country. Guy Bolton is writing the screen play and John Blystone is named as director. Heard today that James Dunn is taking his role opposite Peggy in "Society Girl" very seriously. He plays a prize fighter and he has gone into acual training.

Noel Coward Coming

Headed straight for the Fox studios is Noel Coward, eminent English actor and playwright. Mr. Coward is enroute here to talk production on his play, "Cavalcade." He is bringing with him as his guests, Lord Amherst and Berstein, owners of the Phoenix Theater in London. I was at the Phoenix Theater that the Coward play, "Private Lives," had such a long and prosperous run. Mr. Coward, just between us, will act as sort of supervisor and boss for his play, "Cavalcade," slated as a coming Fox production.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JANET GAYNOR recovering from the loss of a wisdom tooth. EDITH WILKERSON going air-riding with WALLACE BEERY, her hero. Both deny an elopement. Also BILLY WILKERSON and MRS. BEERY deny WALLY'S intentions are matrimony. CHESTER VANDERLIP, Hollywood's most popular banker, lunching with his boss, DR. GIANNINI, at the Brown Derby. EVELYN BRENT has lost her sun tan. She spent hundreds, too, on sun arc lamps to keep it. Shows the real sun has no rivals. HAROLD LLOYD using artificial rain in his picture. Should have made it a few weeks ago when it rained every day. MRS. GARDNER SULLIVAN entertaining a few friends in honor of MRS. ERNEST TORRENCE. The TORRENCES leave for England shortly. JEANETTE MacDONALD is giving a belated birthday party for ROBERT RITCHIE Saturday night. It was postponed when she went East. MRS. BROCK PEMBERTON showing some interesting stills of ANN HARDING in a new hairdress. That's all today.

Novelties for the Scollay

Next week's vaudeville bill at the Scollay will feature comedy, an Oriental novelty, singing, and dancing. Sol Gould will provide comedy in his skit "The Road To Mandalay," in which he will be assisted by Connie Alms and Al Gould. Handers, Millis and Company have a revue that will feature singing, dancing, and comedy.

Symphony Orchestra in New Concert Series

The 18th pair, of regular concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will present the Concerto in D major by Emanuel Bach which has been arranged by Maximilian Steinberg. Stravinsky's Suite for Small Orchestra from Pergolesi's Ballet "Pulcinella" will also be played.

SAGACIOUS

Ann Corio Star at Howard

Ann Corio arrives on Monday at the Old Howard as an extra added attraction. Miss Corio will introduce a number of dancing steps and will also offer new songs.

The "Follies of the Day" is the Columbia burlesque attraction. Charles "Boob" Smith and Lee Hickman divide the honors and both are favorites at the Howard. Gypsy Rae Reed is a clever girl. Mary Noel, La Verne Williams, Nona Martin and Ray Parsons are stars.

In addition there are vaudeville and talking picture hits. The Four La Pearls have an acrobatic novelty and Chappelle and Stennette are colored steppers. The talkies are "The Guilty Generation," with Leo Carillo and Constance Cummings, and "One Way Trail," with Tim McCoy.

The midnight show comes on Friday night at 11:30.

Conrad Nagel Triumphs in His Personality and His Acting

Out of Hollywood has come its master voice and its top masculine personality. Conrad is his first name, and all you fans have guessed that Nagel follows it up. He measures up to all one has heard of him from many sources, and all one has seen of him on screen, and read of him here and there. Did he not have the best stage business of any of the Hollywood stars to come via the vaudeville route, he would still be a triumph; he is that kind of a he-man—the kind that can conquer any audience.

Conrad Nagel

So you will not be surprised to note that he brings outburst after outburst of applause at Loew's Orpheum, where he is "standing them up." He has with him a clever actress, Ruth Marsh, petite and attractive, and a man or two to give assistance. Most of his offering smacks of the reel, and is so well done that it seems very real. First, there is a silver sheet flash by way of introduction; then comes the star himself, able to say his say only after the vociferous handclapping has died down. Next, a corking good skit, done with a comedy touch, a screen test for an ambitious lassie. Do you recall that bit Leatrice Joy did here in her repertory last spring—the girl fan greeting this Conrad Nagel? Well, some of Mr. Nagel's own stuff will bring vividly to mind Miss Joy's references to him.

Mr. Nagel's histrionic effort winds up with a striking bit from "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Both he and Miss Marsh are superb. Thereafter, it is up to Mr. Nagel to satisfy his audience which tenders him a sort of cumulative ovation. And he deserves every bit of it; for he is assuredly one of the best footlight features to come out of filmland.

This Conrad Nagel is a magnetic chap, splendid actor and a man to be admired by man and woman alike. Miss Joy, and Belle Bennett, and a small host of other had given us the word that he was "one of God's own," the most popular man in Hollywood, and now you can see why this is so.

The rest of the Orpheum stage bill is excellent—gay Joe Marks and his company, the Piccani troupe of stellar acrobats, Gloria Lee and the Sheer Brothers, dancers, and John R. Walsh songs.

On screen, the feature is "The Greeks Had a Word for Them," a pleasing comedy of golddigger ladies, already reviewed on this page. Among the fine shorts is a magnificent Hearst Metrotone Newsreel, wherein the "shots" of the Lindbergh baby present interest greater than that of many a full length movie.

Every fan should try to get into the Orpheum this week somehow, to carry off the memory of Conrad Nagel in the flesh, a man's man among the movie men.

H. S.

Globe Trotter

The only motion pictures ever made of Col. Lindbergh's baby son are being shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's State and Orpheum, as the outstanding part of scenes in connection with the sensational kidnaping of the most famous baby in the world. This film, taken by members of the household, was given out by Col. Lindbergh to make the public familiar with the features and appearance of the stolen boy. The pictures show Lindbergh, Jr., at play in the garden, climbing about his outdoor crib, with his nurse in his nursery, together with many striking closeups.

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, Cal., March 5—He had just gone home after working hard at the studio all day and his wife immediately pounced on him.

"Listen, Henry," she began, "I've got a lot of things that I want to talk to you about."

"That's fine," replied her bitter half, "you usually want to talk to me about a lot of things you haven't got."

FIRES DRIVE 24 FROM BEDS IN BOSTON

Twenty-four persons, including several children, fled to the streets in night-clothing early today as three separate fires swept through houses in Dorchester and Roxbury. One man required hospital treatment for smoke inhalation.

The first blaze, which broke out in a house in Ridgefield st., Dorchester, was caused, according to police, by an overheated furnace. Four persons were driven out in this fire and Hyman Starr, first floor occupant, was taken to St. Margaret's Hospital. He was held for treatment for smoke inhalation. Damage was estimated at $1500.

The second blaze broke out in the cellar of a three-story building at 190 Normandy st., Roxbury. Twelve persons, including several children, fled to the street, but returned after being assured of their safety by police and firemen. Damage was set at $700 and police said the blaze was caused by hot ashes.

Similar cause was given by police for the third blaze in a two story building at 4 Schuyler st., Roxbury, shortly after 3 a. m., in which eight persons were driven to the street. Damage was set at $2500.

$2,000,000 FOR CITY HOSPITAL

To relieve the extremely crowded conditions at Boston City Hospital Mayor Curley and other prominent persons will appear before the legislative committee on municipal finance Monday and urge passage of an act to permit the city to borrow $2,000,000 for additional buildings.

The City Hospital has met the challenge forced upon it by unemployment conditions. No worthy person in need of medical or surgical aid has been turned away. As a result the institution is taxed for space as never before.

Some idea of the crowded condition of the hospital may be gleaned from the fact that there are at present 210 persons lying on cots and beds crowded in hospital aisles.

With the $2,000,000 asked for by the mayor the old pathological building at Massachusetts ave. and Albany st. would be torn down and a new eight-story surgical building would be erected on the site.

This building will contain from 350 to 400 beds for surgical cases as well as operating rooms, sterilizing rooms, fumigating rooms, central clothes room and the ear, eye and nose department.

This surgical building, modern in every detail, would cost $1,400,000.

With the remaining $600,000 of the appropriation the old medical pavilion, which now houses wards F, G and H would be demolished and a ten-story building for 250 medical patients would be erected.

The erection of these fine buildings would complete the program for the hospital started by Mayor Curley during his second term as chief executive of the city.

"I don't know what the people of Boston would have done during the present period if it had not been for the City Hospital," said Dr. Dowling, director of the institution.

"In the fall we will open a building containing 260 beds for treatment of children and that will relieve the crowded condition somewhat, but not enough.

Butler's Daughter Weds Lieut. Wehle

West Chester, Pa., March 5 (INS)—Miss Ethel Peters Butler, daughter of Maj.-Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired, became the bride of Lieut. John Wehle, of Norwalk, Ct., amid a colorful assemblage of marine officers and other prominent guests including Gov. Gifford Pinchot, today.

As the wedding march was played, the couple walked down the aisle of the church and under an arch of swords formed by marine officers. A reception at the bride's home followed the church ceremony.

Hoover 'Too Busy' to See Mooney's Mother

Washington, March 5 (INS)—Mrs. Mary Mooney, 84-year-old mother of Tom Mooney, made an unsuccessful effort to see President Hoover today and enlist his support in the effort to free her son from prison.

The aged woman was received at the White House by Theodore Joslin, one of the President's secretaries, who informed her that Mr. Hoover was "too busy" to see her. She left with Joslin, however, a written plea for presidential intercession.

Vermonters Plead for Vets' Hospital

Washington, March 5 (AP)—The entire Vermont delegation in Congress pleaded with President Hoover today to aid in locating a veterans hospital within the borders of Vermont.

Rep. Gibson, spokesman, asserted veterans in the state were "218 miles from any veterans hospital facilities.

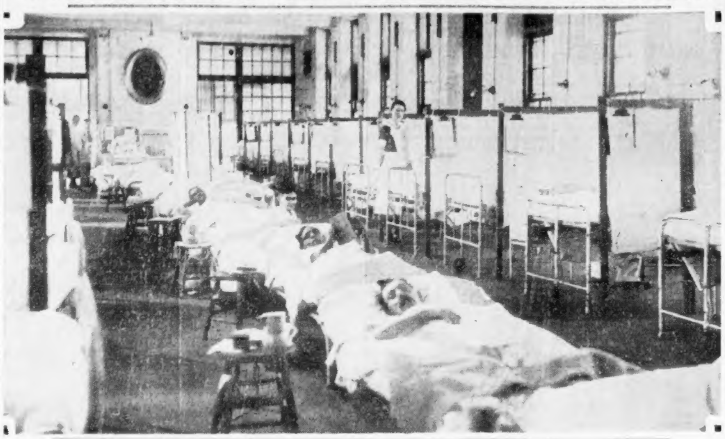
MORE BEDS, MORE ROOM NEEDED FOR BOSTON'S SICK



Here is a striking example of the crowded condition of the wards at the Boston City Hospital. There is little wonder that Mayor Curley and scores of others interested in that institution are to go before the legislative committee on municipal finance on Monday to battle for money. They seek a permit to borrow $2,000,000 to be used for the construction of new hospital buildings. This is Ward T. Beds fill the center of the room. (Staff photo.)

FAMOUS KIDNAPING MYSTERIES

The Charlie Ross Case

By WIN BROOKS

(This is the fourth complete story in a series about famous kidnaping cases in which interest has been reawakened by the abduction of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.).

It is inconceivable that no trace of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., ever will be found.

With the subject of his kidnaping on every tongue and every man and woman an amateur detective engaged in the search, it seems fantastic even to mention a possibility that 50 years from now his fate will be as much of a mystery as it is today . . .

That people will seek him, not knowing if he be alive or dead . . .

That his heart-broken relatives will still live in the hope of learning definitely of his whereabouts or his death . . .

MISSING 58 YEARS

For there was Charlie Ross!

Until a monster reached into a nursery at Hopewell, N. J., Tuesday night, there never had been such a hunt for any human being as that conducted for Charlie Ross, nor such intense and widespread interest in the disappearance of any child.

Charlie Ross was kidnaped from Germantown, Pa., on July 1, 1874, and in the nearly 58 years that have elapsed since, his fate has remained a mystery—commonly referred to as 'the great American mystery.'

Once the world was on the verge of learning what happened to him, but death sealed the lips of the man prepared to tell.

The hue and cry of the hunt for Charlie Ross was heard throughout half the world and a fortune was spent in the search. Another fortune awaited his finder. His name, like Charles A. Lindbergh's, was on every tongue and more than 300 "Charlie Rosses" were turned up by the searchers. But never the right one.

MAY BE ALIVE

Charlie Ross may be alive today, a man on the threshold of old age, speculating on the fate of the Lindbergh child, unaware that he, himself, once was the object of the world's attention in a similar case. Charlie Ross may be alive today, his name a legend and his self unknown.

Charlie was four years old when abductors snatched him. He was the son of Christian K. Ross, a well-to-do Philadelphia merchant, who lived in East Washington lane, Germantown. Charlie had a brother, Walter, who at that time was six.

PROMISED CANDY

Two men who drove a buggy with a top spent considerable time in the vicinity of the Ross home a week before the kidnaping. They made friends with the boys, who played daily on the grounds of their home, giving them candy in exchange for childish trust. To this day, mothers who know the story of Charlie Ross, warn their children never to accept candy from strangers.

Sometime during the afternoon of July 1, the two men drove by the house in the buggy and invited the boys for a ride, promising both candy and firecrackers which could be purchased, they said, at "Aunt Susie's store."

"Aunt Susie's store" meant nothing to the boys—nor to anyone else for that matter—but candy and firecrackers were candy and firecrackers and the boys climbed into the buggy. It started toward Philadelphia.

It was a long ride, so Walter said later, and Charlie got tired and kept saying, "I wanna go home. Charlie wanna go home." He never went home.

The buggy stopped outside a store somewhere and Walter was given 25 cents with which to buy candy and firecrackers. The men said they'd hold Charlie in the buggy.

When Walter had loaded himself up with candy and firecrackers he went out of the store to find the buggy gone, with Charlie and the two men.

SEARCH DELAYED

Walter wandered around and cried and finally someone took him home. No one got very excited about Charlie's disappearance that night, except his parents. The Germantown neighborhood thought Walter was mistaken about the men or that the men had been drunk and carried Charlie off for fun.

Naturally a father wasn't satisfied with any such explanation, especially with his boy still missing. Christian Ross offered a reward of $300.

On July 3 he received a letter from the kidnapers demanding $20,000 and warning him not to put detectives on the trail.

It was the first of a series of crudely written, yet cruelly logical letters that reached him during the next four months, negotiating ransom.

The father was a man of high principals strangely held. Perhaps he was ill-advised. He announced he would not become a party to the commission of a felony even by paying ransom to regain his son. Later he tried to conduct negotiations for a smaller sum.

CLUE IN SCOTLAND

The authorities, who had been dormant, plunged into a frenzied search that included almost every building in Philadelphia. The city posted a $20,000 reward for arrest and conviction of the kidnapers and return of the boy.

Ross received upwards of a score of letters from the men who said they held his son, making demands for ransom. Some of these, mentioning Charlie's peculiarities and the return of an illness from which he had suffered, left no doubt that the author had the boy or knew of his whereabouts. Others, probably, were written by cranks.

Posters bearing Charlie's picture were distributed everywhere. Charlie's father traveled north, east, South and west and even sent a detective to Scotland to investigate false clues.

A policy of "millions for search and conviction, but not one cent for ransom" was continued, although Ross long since had overcome his own qualms regarding payment of the money and was anxious to make contact with the abductors and pay. Philadelphia authorities were unwilling to guarantee immunity to the kidnapers; indeed, they could not legally do so.

While the search became international, letters posted in Philadelphia continued to reach Ross from the persons who claimed they held his boy and who, later developments indicated, really did.

In a few weeks Ross expended in search more than the $20,000 asked for ransom and on Aug. 1, nearly crazed with anxiety, he agreed to a plan laid out by the kidnapers for payment of the ransom.

He was to take a certain train from New York for Albany, stand on the rear platform and when he received a torch or bell signal from a man with a white flag somewhere along the route, was to toss $20,000 in a bag off the train. He was then to proceed to Albany where an agent of the kidnapers would tell him where to find his boy.

DIRECTIONS FALSE

Ross went on the train carrying the bag but there was no $20,000 in it. There was a note in which he asked for "positive, tangible proof" that his child was alive and held by the men who sought the money.

He got no signal along the route. No agent met him at Albany. A letter from the kidnapers a few days later told him they had been led by a story in a newspaper to believe he would not carry out instructions.

The communications continued, and on November 18, 1874, it was agreed that the kidnapers would meet Ross or his agent in a New York hotel, receive $20,000 and deliver the child. Ross' brother went to the hotel with the money but the kidnapers did not appear and nothing ever was heard from them again.

But the search only intensified and spread after the letters stopped, and within a few months, from a source never revealed, police were given information that two desperadoes, William Mosher and Joseph Douglas, were the abductors. A man who said they had asked him to join them in a plot to kidnap a child of the Vanderbilt family for $50,000 ransom tipped the authorities and identified the handwriting in certain of the letters received by Ross as Mosher's.

Mosher and Douglas had dropped from sight in the haunts of the Philadelphia and New York underworld. They had vanished as completely as Charley, although police twice reported they were nearly under arrest the last time in New York.

APPEALS IGNORED

Mrs. Ross, tortured as only a mother who has lost her baby is tortured, became desperate.

Acting without advice (for how cruelly advice had failed her!) she inserted two notices in the nation's press agreeing to any terms the kidnapers might lay down.

She was too late. There never was any answer to her appeal.

Almost six months after Charley Ross vanished, two robbers entered the home of Supreme Court Justice Charles Van Brunt in Bay Ridge, N. Y. J. Holmes Van Brunt, brother of the judge, opened fire on them and both fell.

ROBBERS IDENTIFIED

One, dying, said:

"My name is Joseph Douglas. That other man is William Mosher. It's no use lying now. Mosher and I stole Charley Ross from Germantown. Mosher will tell you about it."

They rushed to Mosher. Mosher was dead with a bullet in his heart. Douglas was told.

"What happened to Charlie?" he was asked.

"Charlie Ross —" he began. And died.

Walter Ross identified the bodies of the dead men as those who took him and Charlie Ross for a ride in their buggy. William Westervelt, Mosher's brother-in-law and a former policeman, was tried and convicted for conspiracy and sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary; he had been under suspicion while Mosher and Douglas were being sought.

For years and years after that 'Charlie Rosses" turned up or were turned up, some claiming, some denying the distinction of being the missing boy. As late as 1928 a man was brought forward as the kidnaped "boy." But it is quite positive that no one knows what was the fate of Charlie Ross and that no one ever will.

Armstrong Cork Reports Net Loss

New York, March 5—Armstrong Cork Co. for 1931 reports a net loss of $3,823,431 after depreciation, interest, inventory adjustment and other charges, including losses of foreign subsidiaries amounting to $818,373. In 1930, excluding losses of foreign subsidiaries, estimated at $750,000, the company showed a net loss of $3,364,413.

During the past year the company retired $1,063,500 par value of 5 per cent bonds.

W. T. Grant Sales Rise in February

New York, March 5—W. T. Grant Co. report sales of $4,838,564 for February as compared with $4,347,485 for the like month in 1931. Sales for the first two months totaled $9,333,113 as compared $8,457,202 for the corresponding period in 1931.

JUMP IN RYE LIFTS GRAINS

Chicago, March 5 (INS)—A further bulge of 1 to 1¼c a bushel in rye featured the closing trade in grain futures here today.

Wheat and other grains were helped along by action in rye. Wheat closed ⅛ to ⅝ higher, corn ⅛ to ¼c up and oats ⅜ to ⅝c higher.

Limited offerings continued in rye. Actual export sales have not been large as exporters offers are out of line, but an active inquiry persists under the market.

STOCKS FINISH STRONG IN BOSTON

Stocks finished strong in today's short session of trading on the Boston Stock Exchange. Changes in the leading issues ranged from 1 to nearly 5 points. Rail shares started the rally and Atchison was worked up around 5 points and ended the week at 87⅞.

New Haven was over 2 points above its previous closing level. Pennsylvania was around a point higher. Utilities, with the exception of Edison Electric, which showed a loss of nearly 3 points at 195¼, were strong.

American Telephone advanced over 2 points and closed at 135. General Electric was up well over a point and finished at 21⅞. Gillette gained over a point at 23¾ and Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred closed at 61, up a point.

McCrory Stores Sales Show a Gain

New York, March 5—February sales of McCrory Stores totaled $3,066,752, up 4.1 per cent from the $2,945,965 shown in February last year, while total for the two months was $5,986,034, as compared with $5,848,468 in the 1931 period, a gain of 2.3 per cent. Company had 241 stores in operation at the end of February, two less than a year ago.

Electric Coal Co.'s Output at Record

New York, March 5—United Electric Coal Companies established a new production record in February, registering a gain of 26,319 tons over January and exceeding the previous record set in Dec. 31, 1931, by 13,693 tons.

Cotton Is Barely Steady at Finish

New York, March 5—Recovery came from an opening decline in cotton today. After selling up from 7.06 to 7.15 for May futures eased under week-end realizing. May closed at 7.09 with the general market barely steady, net unchanged to 6 points lower.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the market continues to act in manner that justifies the recent forecasts of the conservative element. Nothing spectacular is looked for. Neither is it wanted. Accumulation for long term holdings is still going on during the setbacks. It seems warranted provided cash is not entirely tied up.

The Situation

This week has seen the fracturing of the second bear market axiom. It came about when the popular averages broke out of a narrow trading range on the upside. Heretofore dullness has been followed by sudden gusts of selling that started the list toward new low territory. The other happening breaking bear precedent was the ability of the market to close above the low of the previous bottom. In this case the low of October.

From a technical standpoint one more happening will just about convince observers the bear market is over. Commentators point out that the averages have been unable to recover 50 per cent of their previous loss at any time since 1929. At present the chances of this occuring are good. A move to 95 on the Dow-Jones industrial index will complete the breakup of the bear market pattern.

Boardroom Briefs

Remembering that the rail averages refused to confirm the early January drop of industrials to a new low it can be said that three selling rules failed to develop as customary . . . The motor trucks are receiving quite a play from interests who look for a better than average demand from the rails . . . Tape readers feel General Electric discounted the dividend cut when it sank just under 18 . . .

In connection with the gold holding figure of the Bank of France it is to be remembered the reason holdings exceed those of the Federal Reserve is that it includes all French gold . . . The Federal Reserve figure does not include the holdings of the U. S. Treasury . . . This gives the U. S. an edge of approximately a billion and a quarter . . . Brokers are advising the purchase of public utility holding companies . . .

Geometric Industries

A foremost English financial advisor believes it is well to concentrate in the geometric industries. He defines these as producing goods likely to experience a demand greater than the productive capacity of the industry as a whole. While they naturally suffer when depression sets in, the balance between supply and demand usually makes for a rapid comeback.

The most promising industries at present are artificial silk, chemical, aircraft, commercial alcohol, electrical equipment, canning, stainless steel, cement and chain stores. All have quitted the infant stage and have a promising future. He feels that any investor concentrating purchases to the well managed, financially reliable concerns engaged in the industries listed, seems sure of profits in the next four years.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

WHAT is reported as good accumulation is understood to be taking place in some of the oil group. Buying is reported to be of a very quiet nature, with chief interest centered in such issues as Standard of California, Standard of New Jersey and Socony-Vacuum.

Outlook for Industry Is Somewhat Clouded

Present position of the industry, however, still leaves the outlook somewhat clouded. Stocks of crude and refined on January 31 were 632,030,000 barrels, against 621,984,000 on December 31, and 662,196,000 barrels on January 31, 1931. Gasoline stocks were 57,362,000 barrels on January 31, against 42,320,000 on December 31 and 42,818,000 on January 31, 1931. This represents 59 days supply at the end of January, against 39 on December 31 and 31 on January 31, 1931.

Lambert Shorts Show Nervousness

Reports current have it that Lambert directors may maintain the $8 basis when they meet on Monday, and this report is said to have caused the shorts in the stock some nervousness. The yield, however, is 16 per cent.

Question Present Dividend on "AR"

In 1930 the net was $11,098,751, or a net of $3.77 a common share.

Stronger Prices Would Aid Net

Although immediate prospects for the company would seem to indicate a continuance of limited earnings, it is pointed out that a period of somewhat stronger prices for metals, even if accompanied by only moderate volume, would be a substantial aid to net, inasmuch as further large inventory losses would be avoided. Under existing conditions, some quarters are inclined to regard even the present common dividend of 50 cents a share as rather insecure.

Paramount Group Pleasant Surprise

According to Wall Street report, the group operating on the constructive side of Paramount received a pleasant surprise this week when, from an unknown source, large buying orders were placed in the market.

SPECTATOR Says:

The market is obviously trying to do better. While the tape indicates higher prices, it would be well to wait and see if stocks can break out of their narrow trading range.

Lambert Runup

Runup in Lambert was accompanied by the story that the $8 dividend would be maintained on Monday. The stock is selling to yield about 16 per cent, which suggests a different story, though 1931 net covered the payment.

Better action of the rails has followed reports that a constructive announcement on consolidation would be forthcoming from Washington soon.

Here and There

The Chicago crowd is active in Borg Warner again . . . An important Wall Street figure is linked with the strength in Montgomery Ward . . . Better feeling about drug followed completion of the last of forced selling the other day. The stock is said to habor a sleeping short interest . . .

Private advices from Detroit are that Ford is passing out big orders and that things are humming again.

Bond Market

Activity and buoyancy have characterized the week's bond market on the New York Stock Exchange. The gains, which ranged from fractions to about half dozen points, were not confined to any particular portion of the list but were spread through the foreign government, United States Government, domestic corporation and railroad issues.

Action of the Bank of England in repaying $150,000,000 of its $200,000,000 credit obtained here last August for a period of 1 year served to stimulate demand for the 5 per cent issue listed here and lifted the lien above par to a new high for the year.

The payment of the $150,000,000 came as one of the most favorable developments in months, and accompanied the reports from the England that not only was the budget there being balanced but a surplus over expenditures was expected.

RAILWAYS SET FUEL RECORDS

[illegible] March 5—[illegible] the [illegible] op[illegible] in 1931, one [illegible] the [illegible] Railway Age [illegible] fact that the 1931 [illegible] of railway fuel set the [illegible] annual record for increased efficiency in [illegible] service and the eighth consecutive record in passenger service.

"In 1923," says the Railway Age, "when a comprehensive program to increase transportation efficiency was adopted by the Association of Railway Executives, 161 lb. of fuel were required in freight service to move 1000 tons a distance of one mile. This figure was successively reduced each year until in 1931 this same amount of work required the consumption of only 119 lb. of coal, a decrease of 26 per cent. Likewise, the fuel consumed in moving a passenger-train car one mile, amounting to 18.1 lb. in 1923, was cut to 14.5 lb. in 1931, a reduction of 20 per cent.

"Reversing these figures to show the amount of work done by a pound of fuel, it is seen that a pound of coal was used in railway freight service to move one ton a distance of 6.2 miles in 1923, while in 1931 one pound of coal moved a ton 8.4 miles, an increase in productivity of 35 per cent. Likewise, in passenger service a pound of coal moved a passenger-train car a distance of 292 ft. in 1923 and 364 ft. in 1931, an increase of 25 per cent."

The Life of John N. Garner

—By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN—

CHAPTER XIII

SUCCESS IN life is due to ambition, [illegible] brains and accident.

John N. Garner's [illegible] career was [illegible] the ambition to be the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

He was endowed with courage and energy. He brought to bear upon the [illegible] which developed upon him an [illegible] capacity.

But an accident which [illegible] [illegible] at [illegible] change in party leadership in the House [illegible] Seventieth Congress [illegible] never [illegible] from the [illegible] to the Speakership. He was [illegible] to have [illegible] of his goal when he had at last reached it.

To understand how the time [illegible] to analyze what happened in the House of Representatives after the Democratic [illegible] under Woodrow Wilson in 1918, and in 1920, the years in which Garner was [illegible] to the [illegible] of his powers.

While Warren G. Harding was being inaugurated as President of the United States on March 4, 1921, the flags over the Capitol were at half mast for a great American leader and the Democratic [illegible].

CHAMP CLARK DIES

From March 1915 to March 1919, in the sixty-fourth and sixty-fifth Congresses, Claude Kitchin of North Carolina was chairman of the ways and means committee.

Under the Democratic reforms which took place when Clark was elected Speaker at the beginning of the sixty-second Congress in 1911, it was arranged by the Democrats that the Democratic members of the ways and means committee should comprise the committee on committees, charged with the creation of the House committees, and with responsibility for party policies, and that the Democratic chairman of ways and means should be the floor leader of the party. This arrangement concentrated a considerable power in the hands of the chairman of ways and means, who in this instance was Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama.

When Underwood went to the Senate Claude Kitchin became the chairman of Ways and Means.

The Democrats lost the House with the opening of the Sixty-sixth Congress in 1919 and Kitchin, as former Chairman of Ways and Means, became the ranking Democrat on that committee. But he [illegible] as Minority Leader, the head of his party in the House, and Champ Clark filled that position and was the Democratic candidate for Speaker against Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts.

KITCHIN IS LEADER

Toward the end of his service Mr. Kitchin [illegible] became Minority Leader [illegible] the passing of [illegible]. He was in ill health. He was [illegible] Democrat on the tariff question [illegible] free trade [illegible]. Garner believed [illegible] he was entitled to [illegible] with [illegible] precepts. The gentleman from Texas was not wholly in harmony with his party on this question and not at all in harmony with Kitchin. In passing it should be recalled that in 1928, Garner had the satisfaction of seeing the [illegible] of his party, Alfred E. Smith, take the position on the tariff which he had [illegible] years before.

Kitchin finally became too ill to [illegible] his duties, and he now did an extraordinary thing, which [illegible] in the end have [illegible] John N. Garner the Speakership had not fate [illegible] at the eleventh hour.

Kitchin went before the Democratic caucus and, explaining the condition of his health, proposed that the caucus designate Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee as minority leader in his absence. Presumably he did this because of Garner's conservative views on the tariff.

A RADICAL DEPARTURE

It was a radical departure from the [illegible] precedent [illegible] Champ Clark [illegible]. Since [illegible] the ranking Democrat on ways and means had been the Democratic leader. And Garrett was not even a member of the ways and means. However, the caucus agreed to Kitchin's proposal.

Garner had been placed on ways and means at the beginning of the Sixty-third Congress in 1913 and had helped to write the Underwood-Simmons tariff law. He was then [illegible] Democrat in rank. Kitchin, Henry T. Rainey, Cordell Hull of Tennessee, A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania and others ranked him.

But Palmer left the House [illegible] in the Sixty-sixth Congress [illegible] was [illegible] Hull [illegible] his place there [illegible] now [illegible] Harrison, Henry T. Rainey were [illegible] for the Sixty-seventh Congress. Kitchin was then the ranking Democrat on that powerful committee and Garner was now next.

Thus by surviving the elections of 192[illegible] when Democrats ahead of him on the committee were defeated, Garner was in second place on the Democratic side of ways and means.

KITCHIN PASSES AWAY

Claude Kitchin died in May, 1923 before the sixty-eighth Congress convened, and when that Congress met, Garner was, by seniority rule at the top of the Democratic list on ways and means. The long gruelling climb of a life time was at an end.

But by the perversity of fate, he was not the Democratic leader. There, in that place, stood Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, who owed his standing in the party to his place on the rules committee.

Garner's friends canvassed the House to ascertain if the Texan could be elected minority leader. It was found a party fight, perhaps a disastrous split. In the interest of party harmony Garner did not become a candidate for the minority leadership in the Democratic caucus and Garrett remained fixed, entrenched as the leader of his party in the House. This won for Garner later on [illegible] of Garrett's friends in the House.

There was one thing, however, and an important thing, that John N. Garner did keep. As ranking Democrat on Ways and Means he exerted the power of patronage conferred by the Champ Clark organization, the power of chairman of the Democratic committee on committees, which determined all Democratic committee places in the House.

RETAINS CHAIRMANSHIP

And he also retained the chairmanship of the Democratic committee not of the House but of the [illegible] which determined party [illegible]. Two strong factors in leadership were still his.

It is to the eternal credit of John N. Garner as a party man, believing in the [illegible] system of government through parties, that he supported Garrett, the minority leader, with absolute loyalty.

No discord was ever [illegible] between the two men as they worked [illegible] side by side with [illegible] harmony. They saw things together with a single eye and worked for the good of the party. Garner [illegible] but of the two he was the stronger.

When the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was put through by the Republican party in 1930 Garner labored against its iniquitous features in committee and voted against the bill. There was enormous pressure exerted upon him in his own district to induce him to support it because of the protection it gave to certain agricultural products in that district. He stood firm.

GARRETT IS PICKED

Still it was Finis J. Garrett who was the Democratic nominee for the Speakership in the Sixty-eighth, Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Congresses. Claude Kitchin had certainly thrown the switch on the Garner Speakership Special.

What would have happened if Finis J. Garrett had remained in Congress? If he had been his party's candidate for the Speakership in the Seventy-first Congress in all human probability he would have been his party's candidate for that high office in the Seventy-second Congress and would have been elected Speaker.

Here is an evident fate call it what you will interposed to shape the career of John N. Garner.

Finis J. Garrett left the House and made an unsuccessful race for the Senate. On Feb. 18, 1929, he accepted an appointment by President Coolidge as judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. His Congressional career was at an end.

In the Seventy-first Congress, John N. Garner, who for twenty-six years had stuck doggedly to his job of being a member of the House of Representatives, thus came into the full possession of all his prerogatives.

He was ranking Democrat on Ways and Means and became Minority Leader in his own right.

He was his party's candidate for the Speakership in 1928, but his old friend, Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, defeated him.

But many deaths occurred, including that of the beloved Longworth himself.

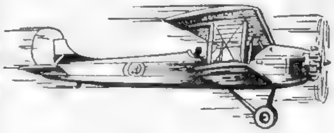
By the time the Seventy-second Congress convened the Democrats had a slender majority of four, since increased to five.

Fate in her most dramatic mood seemed to have interposed to make John N. Garner at last, after twenty-eight years of faithful service to the country, the Speaker of the House, and the Democratic leader of the nation.

To be concluded tomorrow in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

A FREE AIRPLANE TRIP TO DETROIT AND RETURN



To The Winner of the

"Aero Facts Contest"

Conducted by the

BOSTON AMERICAN

in co-operation with the air transport section of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America.

Each day, beginning today, important "Aero Facts" questions will be asked. On the final day, March 18th, a subject will be given for a 100-word essay. Contestants will be required to keep all questions and answers until the series has been completed and then to send these answers with the essays. The winner will be awarded a free round-trip airplane ride to Detroit, where he will be taken on a 60-mile airplane flight around the airports of Detroit, enjoy a sight-seeing tour of the city, a tour of the Ford automobile plant, and be an escorted guest at the National Aircraft Show to be held April 2nd to 10th. ANY BOY OR YOUNG MAN BETWEEN THE AGES OF 15 AND 20 IS ELIGIBLE TO COMPETE

HERE ARE THE RULES:

1. The contest is open to any boy reader of the Boston American between the ages of 15 and 20.
2. Members of the families of employees of the Hearst newspapers in Boston and employees of any air transportation company are ineligible to compete.
3. All 23 questions printed during the thirteen days of the contest must be answered and the complete set forwarded in one mailing to the "Aero Facts" Contest Editor, Boston American, Box 185, Boston, Mass.
4. No answers postmarked after midnight on March 23rd will be considered.
5. The questions have been prepared by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America which retains the correct answers to the first 23 questions. The 24th question will be judged on the merits of the contribution itself.
6. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce will appoint two judges and the Boston American will appoint the third judge, who shall judge the answers and essays of all contestants and select the winner.
7. The decision of the judges shall in all cases be final and each competitor agrees, as a condition of his entry in the contest, that he will accept such decision without question or appeal.
8. The winner shall only be entitled to the prize trip if and when his parents shall have signed a release absolving all parties to the contest, including the airplane carriers, the newspapers and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and the Aircraft Expositions Corporation from all responsibility for accidents, and an adequate policy of accident insurance will be provided to cover the winner on his trip from the time of leaving his home city until his return.
9. In the event of a failure of the parents of the winner to sign satisfactory releases, the winner of the trip shall be the entry next in order as selected by the judges who can meet the qualifying conditions.
10. The Boston American reserves the right to alter or amend these rules at any time during the contest.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS, MARCH 5

1. How much more does it cost to send the average letter by air mail than by ordinary mail?
2. Can ordinary stamps be used for an air mail letter?

Keep these until essay subject is announced. Then send to "Aero Facts" Contest Editor, Boston American, Box 185, Boston, Mass.

NEXT QUESTIONS, MONDAY, MARCH 7

CURLEY TO TALK THRICE IN N. H.

Mayor Curley will call on the Democrats of New Hampshire to support the candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the nomination for President at a meeting in Hotel Carpenter, Manchester, Monday evening.

The speech which will be broadcast over a local station will be the third the Mayor will make in that city on that day. Plans had been kept secret until today.

At noon that day the Mayor will discuss the Port of Boston at a luncheon of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. Early in the evening, at a meeting of the Professional Women's Club of that city, he will discuss unemployment and municipal relief work.

Heavy Voting in Milton Election

Milton voters cast their ballots today for candidates for selectmen, assessor, school committee, park board, board of health and constables, and a heavy vote was expected in the closing hour.

Chairman Laurence R. Flint's voluntary retirement from the board of selectmen, making an opening for a newcomer, attracted more than usual interest to the town election.

SILVERMAN IS STRIKE ARBITER

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman today became neutral arbiter of the garment manufacturing industry of Boston.

Silverman's appointment was made by Mayor Curley following a conference at City Hall of strikers' representatives and those of the manufacturers' association.

The mayor told those in attendance he was anxious to keep the industry in Boston and likewise to preserve peace here. He urged both sides to make every possible effort to settle their differences.

All pledged themselves to do so and agreed to the appointment of Silverman as arbiter.

Among those present were U. S. Commissioners of Conciliation Charles G. Wood and Anna Weinstock of the department of labor.

Middlesex County Lindy Clue Fails

In a statement that said all clues thus far have been run down by state detectives, Bishop said he saw no reason for further investigation here.

FANNING

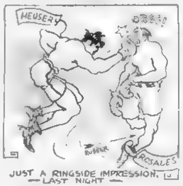
With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

We Gotta Get Glasses. ↑ Babe Is Experimenting.
Our Eyes Must Be Bad. Hack Shrinks a Little.
We Thought Fields Won.↓ Bit o' This an' That.

Ad Heuser's Real Name Must Be Howitzer

Maybe your Uncle George is getting a bit google-eyed, has a spavin in his right optic and the epizootic in the left. If that is so the oculists haven't discovered it. There must be something wrong with our eyesight, however, for, as we saw it, Jackie Fields, world welterweight champion, clearly was entitled to the decision over our own Johnny Indrisano in their 10-round tete-a-tete before a fair to middlin' house in the Boston Garden, last night. But when the final gong rang and the slips of the judges and the third man in the ring were taken up, why Referee Johnny Brassil strode over and raised the boy from Noddle Island's hand aloft in token of triumph. And the crowd bellowed a vociferous approval. So that makes us all wrong, Mawruss, all wrong! And it looks as if we would have to go to an oculist for an examination. Heigho! It's difference of opinion that makes life worth living.

We have to call a fight the way we see it. We can't see it with the other fellow's eyes. As we saw it, Indrisano came out of the stable and, badly in need of fights, met a fellow right in the fistic pink and with fighting blade whetted to razor sharpness through recent competition. Although Johnny plainly was off in timing and distance and fought on his own without the benefit of the expert advice and handling Fields received from foxy, astute Jack Kearns and experienced Al Lacey in the opposite corner, he fought a splendid, courageous fight and held his own some of the time and at intervals even gained the upperhand. But our compilation of points gave Fields six rounds and Indrisano four. According to our score, Fields won. Our decision means nothing. It's the official decision that counts, Old Deahs



JUST A RINGSIDE IMPRESSION, —LAST NIGHT—

The verdict in favor of the local scrapper was greeted with wild acclaim. It was an Indrisano crowd. The decision also means a title match between the two, now. Last night's affair was fought over the championship weights of 147 pounds, Johnny scaling 151¼ and Jackie, 148½. With last night's fight under his belt and more time to sharpen up on his hitting and improve his timing and distance, maybe in the title go to come, Johnny will win convincingly enough even to convince your Uncle George, who is likely to be ostracised for thinking the local lad didn't lick the champion, last night

Ad Howitzer—excuse us, we mean Heuser but he fires his punches like a howitzer, anyway—played "Die Wacht Am Rhein" all over the anatomy of Rosy Rosales, the Mexican Indian from Cleveland in the 8-round semi-windup. But the Injun from O-ho no proved a tough one for Hurricane Heine to fight and Ad didn't look so sweet as he did in his last Garden appearance. When we first picked Heuser it was from a gym appearance. We had our first ring peek at him, last night. He isn't as heavy a hitter as we thought, but boy, oh boy, how that Dutchman can toss leather! He's the closest thing to Harry Greb we've seen in a long time. Tip O'Neill voted his name should be O'Brien and the gang backed him up

Babe Ruth declares it is never too late to learn ..The Bambino is choking his bat a little and taking a shorter step in an endeavor to cut down his strikeouts...Is using the Joe Sewell stance at bat Joe had less strikeouts than any other big leaguer To-night's Yale-Harvard hockey clash in the Garden has the town by the ears Harvard's only hockey defeats this year were by Boston Hockey Club and McGill In a return game with McGill the Crimson collegians turned the tables Yale has been beaten by Harvard, Princeton, Boston Olympics, Crescent A C and Clarkson Tech Harvard and Yale first met at hockey Feb. 26, 1900 .. The firm of Johnston, Johnston, Johnston & Johnston—Jimmy Johnston and a few of his numerous progeny—have added Benny Leonard and Al Singer to their numerous pugilistic holdings.. Looks as if the Johnstons were out to corner the Cauliflower market.. Leonard was supposed to be under Jack Kearns' management, but the story is Leonard refused to give up more than 25 per cent as a managerial cut and Kearns operates on a 50 per cent or nothing basis ..Sounds good but the little birdies say a Jackie Fields vs. Benny Leonard match is proposed this summer and it wouldn't do for Kearns publicly to be known as manager of both fighters Chicago broadcasting station has a representative at the Cubs training camp covering the activities of the Wrigley outfit for a newspaper Just getting back at the newspaper columnists for invading the radio field

Joe McCluskey comes out of Fordham Infirmary, where he was suffering with a heavy cold, to try to hang up a new 2-mile record . And Fordham Joe may do it . . . Harvard's mainstays are Gene Record, Oscar Sutermeister, Penn Hallowell and Murdock Finlayson . . . Latest is Murphy will out run in 2-mile . . . The mile relay should be a humdinger . . . Six teams have records of 3.25 . . . The relay winner should come from among Pennsy, N. Y. U. and Holy Cross . . . The B. C. vs. N. Y. U. duel in the 2-mile relay should be a thriller . . . With six men who have cracked 4:20 in the mile, that race also should be a pippin.

Dear old London Graphic in a hockey review declares "hockey is not adaptable to indoor rinks" . . . Hee! Haw! . . . "You can't pack it up small and plant it indoors any more than you can make a golf course out of a 10-acre field," says the English expert . . . More he-haws . . . Patsy Perrone, who got a decision over Ad Heuser in Cleveland last December, hasn't fought since .

Yale's veteran aggregation is set to make a desperate comeback tonight, for a victory over Harvard would even the series and give Yale the added advantage of a third game in New Haven

Only an attack of overconfidence stands between Harvard and a clean sweep of the series, and to off et this bugaboo Coach [illegible] has had his Crimson [illegible] practice sessions all this week

Yale will undoubtedly benefit from the experience gained in the first game of the series, however, and the Elis are not apt to be caught in the same trap again.

For Harvard there still remains the problem of keeping Dunbar Bostwick and Kay Todd bottled up Mike Baldwin must watch Bostwick at right wing for Yale tonight

Barry Wood needs only two [illegible] to make him high scorer for the Harvard club this season. At present he has 17 markers [illegible] credit while at the same time he is Harvard's most valuable [illegible] according to the records of the assists he has made so far

BUSTER CHATHAM NEARLY WRECKS SHIRES

SPIKED, ART, REFUSES TO QUIT WORK

By JOE CASHMAN

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5—Bill McKechnie w[illegible] first week of B[illegible] a close today with a six-inning game.

Maranville

One nine will have Hargrave, Maranville, Walters and Chatham in the infield, Berger, Eckhardt and Clark in the outfield and Moore catching. The other will have [illegible] Akers, Knothe and [illegible] Worth[illegible] Schulmerich [illegible] the outfield and Benson catching.

Six pitchers will each work two innings.

Buster Chatham very nearly cut short the career of Art Shires for the rest of the training period at least when he spiked the Great One's ankle during the morning practice. The cut was quite deep but clean. There was no apparent bone injury.

Trainer Jimmy Neary of the Tribe dressed the wound and Art insisted on returning to practice. But for a few minutes Bill McKetchnie and the other Warriors were an apprehensive bunch waiting for the verdict on the injury.

Injuries come in threes, they say, and if this is true the Braves are safe for a while. Shires' injury was the third of the trip, with Bruce Cunningham's dented hand, Fritz Knothe's blackened eye the other two casualties.

The task of picking the regular team to start the season, thought easy at first, has developed into a tough job. It's apparent from the way Ross W[illegible] is working the squad that no one is going to ease into a job.

The positions are wide open and the veterans as well as the rookies will keep moving at top speed from now until the training period closes.

Schoolboy Slants

—By GEORGE W. GRIMM—

Today [illegible] winds up the schoolboy season for track. Of course the outstanding track meet for today is the Regimentals which will be held at the East Armory starting at 1.30. English is expected to romp through with an easy win with such stars as Capt. Vale Marvin and Larry Scanlon.

There are several dual meets on tap. Lawrence and Lowell will hook up on the Lowell track in the feature meet of the day.

Both teams have made a great showing this season.

All the high school basketball teams are loafing today but there are plenty of prep schools performing. Some of the best games are Hebron at Exeter, St. Anselm's at St. John's Prep, Worcester Academy at Williston, Lawrence Academy at Huntington School and West New York at Rogers.

Next week will be hectic for the basketball fans. No matter what section you live in you have a chance to see your favorites. At the Hangar gymnasium on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Tech tournament will be in progress. On the North Shore at Danvers high school the first basketball tournament ever held in that district, under the direction of Charlie Vye, Danvers coach, will take place on the same three days.

Right now we think that Brockton or Fitchburg will play in the final of the Tech tournament with Salem high and Lynn English considered very dangerous. In the North Shore [illegible] owing to its good record.

Eddie Barber is making a name for himself and Lynn English on the basketball court this season. Up to the first Beverly game he starred in almost every contest. Then he was injured and it was feared he was out for the season. But the hurt shoulder mended quickly and he came back this week against the strong Watertown high five and was again the star of the game.

INJURY MAY SHELVE SOX HURLER

Savannah, Ga., March 5—Another practice game between Moore's Mules and Durham's Bulls is listed today for the Red Sox batterymen. The teams tied 3-3 and this is the playoff.

Al Van Camp led the attack for Bulls and is expected to be a standout today. He is the only player other than pitchers and catchers.

Pitcher Harry Burns was injured when he crashed into the stands and will be idle today. It may be his finish. His stomach is hurt and this will effect his pitching.

Things will start humming Monday when the full squad will be working out. The comparatively brief time left for the candidates to get into shape means a high pressure stretch for the boys.

Reder has all the earmarks of a find and while he may be shooed to the minors for a bit of seasoning there is every indication that he will be a regular in another year if this is not his year. He can play almost any position and capably.

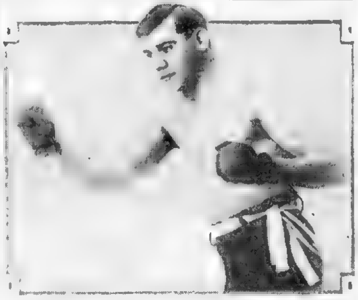
When Coffey Knocked Out Reich in Third

JIM COFFEY, ROSCOMMON GIANT



This series of "Finishes of Old-Time Fights" is an exclusive feature in the sport pages of the Boston Evening American.

The story today tells how Jim Coffey, the "Roscommon Giant," knocked out Al Reich in the Garden ring on the night of May 5, 1915.

By W. S. FARNSWORTH

Al Reich, a burly lad from the Bronx, considered a heavyweight contender, just didn't have the stuff to defeat Jim Coffey. A crowd of 10,000 wild-eyed fans saw Reich give his best for two rounds only to be battered to the canvas in the third session.

The end was foreshadowed near the close of the second round when Coffey sent Reich to his haunches with a wicked right hook to the jaw. Only the bell saved the New York lad from a knockout then and there.

Coffey Generous in Victory

When the count was finished, Coffey, the Irishman of the wistful face, rushed over to the fallen man to whisper some words of sympathy but Reich was only half conscious. His seconds carried the beaten b[illegible] to his corner and Coffey quietly walked to his own.

The men in the Irishman's corner were dancing around him like a group of college students celebrating a football victory. Coffey stood watching his fallen adversary with the same wistful look. When he saw that Reich was recovering he walked over to him and took one of the gloved hands that lay limply in the lap of the defeated gladiator.

Consoles the Vanquished

The Irishman, with his eyes eloquent with pity, bent down and whispered in his opponent's ear. Reich shook the hand feebly and with the other glove dashed the tears that welled to his eyes. Coffey climbed slowly over the ropes and elbowed his way to his dressing room.

Prize fighting, glazed over with its mock heroics and the [illegible] weird notions of chivalry, is a sordid game. But once in a while there is a real flash of the manliness which it is supposed to inculcate. In Coffey's brief fighting career he never exhibited the least evidence of viciousness. And that is why Coffey never was a champion.

Touching All the Bases

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP)—Even in practice, Babe Ruth obviously is the "Spark Plug" of the New York Yankees. The Babe's favorite stunt is to stand up at the plate and drive 'em out among the trees in deep right field, farther than any American league fence, but he's going all the time. Between turns at the plate the Babe takes part in the bunting games along the sidelines or picks up a catcher and warms up for his old job as a pitcher.

Clearwater, Fla., March 5 (AP)—Jack Quinn, who knows what it is to make a comeback, is actively interested in helping Hack Wilson make good with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Hack was having trouble finding his batting eye, so yesterday Quinn kept him for a special batting practice after the drill. Jack tossed them up until Wilson began to connect then kept putting more and more "stuff" on the ball until Hack finally was driving almost any kind of a pitch out of the lot.

Palo Alto, Cal., March 5 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers, divided into "Chinese" and "Japanese" teams, engage in their first baseball game of the year today, with Manager Bucky Harris captaining the Chinese and Coach Jewel Ens the Japanese.

Recruits drew the pitching assignments, Izzy Goldstein and Owen Collier for the Chinese and Phil Page and Buck Marrow for the Japanese. Recruits are liberally interspersed with regulars in the other positions.

Santa Catalina Island, Cal., March 5 (AP)—Today was the day for Rogers Hornsby to send his young Cubs out into something approaching major competition against the New York Giants in the first game of the training season.

Hornsby planned to use four young hurlers to see how they react to the Giants' spring brand of baseball. Three of the youngsters, Lonnie Warneke, Ed Baecht and Le Roy Herrmann, have worked against major league batting before, but Bud Tinning, recruit right-hander from Des Moines, was down for his first test.

San Antonio, Tex., March 5 (AP)—Those heavy, dark blue uniforms, relic of early baseball days which the Chicago White Sox have worn through many seasons, have been abandoned. And with them, the chest emblem, which at a distance, looked like a dollar sign.

This change, a welcome one to the athletes, was revealed last night when they were measured up for new suits.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March [illegible] (AP)—There will be no bonuses for home runs, pitchers' victories or base steals for the St. Louis Browns this season.

Manager Bill Killefer thinks the bonus system damaged the club's standing in the league last year and by discarding it he is confident he will have a better baseball team.

Tampa, Fla., March 5 (AP)—Whether Joe Morrissey, rookie shortstop, accepts a chance with the Cincinnati Reds is up to him. He wired the club management yesterday the reasons why he thought he should have more than a 40 per cent increase over what St. Paul paid him last year. In return, the club told him to take what it offered or leave it.

New Orleans, La., March 5 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians and the New Orleans Pelicans were matched for their first practice game of the season today. Both managers planned to use about 25 players.

Biloxi, Miss., March 5 (AP)—Outfielder Sam West joined the Washington Senators in today's training activities. Arriving late yesterday with his contract in his pocket, he was expected to have no difficulty in coming to terms with President Clark Griffith and probably to sign before the day is out.

Miami, Fla., March 5 (AP)—The victorious St. Louis Cardinals and vanquished Philadelphia Athletics of last year's World Series met here for the initial two games, today and tomorrow, of a series of four marking the first [illegible] blows of the 1932 baseball season.

Popular interest centered about the return of John Leonard (Pepper) Martin to action for the first time since his flight to fame last fall, but the rival teams were chiefly interested in the battle of rookie pitchers.

Marry-Go-Round

WOMEN WHO KISS WITH THEIR EYES CLOSED

—By HELEN ROWLAND—

A MAN used to bestow his heart upon a woman—but, nowadays, about all he usually offers her is a 30-day loan

RENO

When you see what some women finally marry, you just know they were the kind of girls who kissed with their eyes closed

When a woman gets old, she turns to charity, bridge or religion—but not until she has tried every brand of henna and experimented with every kind of facial.

A WOMAN may resent a look of anger or scorn in a man's eyes; but the only look that she absolutely cannot endure is that "faraway look," with which he gazes straight through her—at another woman

They'd never admit it, but there is something akin to envy between a married woman who is sure of her social status and a lifetime of placid, unexciting evenings, and a glittering gold-digger who wears Paris gowns and orchids one month and doesn't know where her rent is coming from, the next.

A GLITTERING GOLD-DIGGER

Most bridal couples on the way to the altar have that strained, tense look—probably because he is nervous about what he's getting into, and she is nervous for fear he may back out of it

A man can't see why he should give a woman ALL his love, when he can so easily sub-divide it, like a suburban tract, and make a lot of women happy

Too Rich Food May Cause Diabetes

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

DIABETES, commonly called "sugar diabetes," is a disease in which the body lacks power to utilize the carbohydrate foods. Many scientific experiments have been made to discover the reason for this condition, and it is now believed to result from a lack of secretion of the pancreas. This is the organ which in the lower animals is called the "sweetbread." Other internal glands may also be out of order

Dr. Copeland

Diabetes may occur at any age but middle-aged and overweight persons who lead lazy, luxurious lives and indulge too freely in rich foods are most frequent victims. Children born into families where diabetes is common sometimes fall victims to the malady.

Anxiety, emotional crises, injuries, grief and shock are among the exciting causes of attacks. They lower the fighting power of the blood

The onset of diabetes is usually quiet and slow. There may be lack of the normal feeling of well-being. Later appear the characteristic symptoms of thirst and greatly increased secretion of urine. Sometimes, in the early stages of the disease, the appetite may be greatly increased.

If the patient is not placed under treatment at this time weakness and emaciation follow. Later, there is increased acidity of the system, due to inability of the body to care for the foods consumed

Until a few years ago, the victim of diabetes faced a dark future unless a strict diet was followed. This was changed with the discovery of insulin. Now the diabetic who puts himself under observation and treatment may expect a relatively useful and comfortable existence

The diet permitted includes all meats with the exception of liver. Fish and sea foods, with the exception of oysters and clams, are permissible, as well as all soups that contain no flour

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Who's Next Victim of Slayer?

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"IF MRS. CAREWE is conscious, I shall have to speak to her now," announced Colt grimly

Baldwin seemed about to protest. Then he shrugged his shoulders helplessly.

"Yes—that is all right," he assented, and without another word the doctor left the apartment, shadowed as before. Note paper in hand, I sat beside the bed in Lola's room as Colt began again to question the pale and haggard Mrs. Carewe, who lay there staring with miserable eyes blindly up at the ceiling.

"Now, Mrs. Carewe," Colt began quietly, laying his hand kindly on the old lady's head, "tell me in a few words what happened just now in your room?"

"It was awful!" she rumbled, her voice deep in her throat. "I had felt hysterical—after you asked me all those questions last time. I lay down in my room. I was restless. I couldn't sleep in my own bed. I got up and went into Lola's room. I went in and turned on the lights. Then I saw—I screamed ——"

Here the pitiful old creature broke down and wept.

"I shall be the next to go," she groaned. "And I won't care—if I can only be with Lola. Who else is there now?"

"We are all going to look out for you," promised the Commissioner soothingly. "If you will help us."

"What can I do?"

"Tell me everything—even your suspicions."

"I will. Before God I will!"

"Where did Christine hide in this apartment?"

"She must have come home before you reached here."

"We feel sure of that, too. But where could she have hidden?"

A blank look was on the old woman's face, as she realized the strange riddle which confronted us. It was as if Christine and her murderer had the power of penetrating matter, of passing silently and invisibly through walls sheathed in steel

"I don't understand any of this," complained the old woman in a low voice. "Do you think—could it be—I mean—oh, but I mustn't let myself get superstitious."

"What were you about to say?" urged the Commissioner

But the old creature obstinately shook her head

"It doesn't matter," she insisted. "It only shows what a coward I am—but I do wonder if anybody is after me—please don't let them, Mr. Colt!"

"You will be most carefully guarded," Colt promised

"And what do you want me to do to help you?"

"Two things. Answer all my questions now—all that you can—"

"Yes, sir."

"And obey all my instructions."

"I will obey truly, Mr. Colt."

"You are not to eat or drink anything prepared in this house. Mrs. Lex will bring you in anything that you desire."

"I will be careful to do as you say. But Mr. Colt, do you actually believe somebody is hidden, waiting to drop poison in our food?"

"I have formed no theory yet. Miss Lex was a woman awake at your bedside throughout the rest of the night."

"I am glad. She is very good to me."

"At noon tomorrow she will be relieved by another woman detective. Would you like a nurse too?"

"No, I'm all right, thanks."

"You are to have no visitors. You must deny yourself to every one."

"I will. I will."

"I am certain, Mrs. Carewe," resumed the Commissioner, soothingly, as he wiped his right hand with a handkerchief, "that you can and will help us by answering my questions. I won't take long. It is almost certain that the deaths of these two women and the threats made against Lola's life are related crimes. Not only on behalf of justice, but for your own safety, you can steel yourself and help me by answering my questions. The more we know the better able we are to protect you."

After a moment Mrs. Carewe whispered that she was ready.

"Christine Margaret Quires."

"Her age?"

"Twenty-two."

"Where is her home?"

"In Rochester."

"With whom did she live there?"

"With her married brother, Edgar Quires. She is an orphan."

"The address?"

"It is on Onondaga ave.—I forget the number."

"Why was Christine Quires living with you?"

"She was just here on a visit."

"How long had she been visiting you?"

"For the last three months."

"Isn't that an unusually long stay for a guest?"

"Lola liked her and wished to help her."

"Did you ever have any other guest stay with you so long?"

"No—I fancy not!"

"Was Christine intending to stay in New York permanently?"

"What was her line of work?"

"Interior decoration and design."

"That's how your daughter met her?"

But the iceless refrigerator [illegible] him than you. It's dark in the room where the refrigerator stands and he has to stretch himself out perfectly flat to keep under there. But he slept there the first night he came to the house and that settled it.

The [illegible] it is a little bit more like a kennel than the comfy [illegible] but somehow I feel like Pat Brannigan for preferring the hard floor and the iceless refrigerator for his shelter. Shows character, I think. Don't you?

And who are we to laugh at him—we, who cling to old prejudices and old ideas, old likes and dislikes, we, who nurse old wrongs, and love to remember grievances that are past? Who are we to laugh at Pat Brannigan, the Irish Terrier, with his bold, loyal heart and his restless bouncing ways—just because he sticks to something uncomfortable for the simple reason that he is used to it?

Danish pastry making [illegible] posed to be [illegible] but by following the simple directions given by K. Carsten Ten Droven in the Martha Lee Cooking School this week, Danish pastry can be made at home with ease and success.

Here is the foundation recipe:

DANISH PASTRY

1 lb. bread flour	4 cups
½ lb. butter	1 cup
1½ oz. yeast	3 yeast cakes
6 oz. milk	¾ cup
2 eggs	2
2 oz. brown sugar	¼ cup

Lemon, vanilla, Almond flavoring

Cream together [illegible] the sugar, salt and [illegible] the eggs and a little of the [illegible] then add the yeast [illegible] the rest of the milk and the [illegible] and mix smooth. [illegible] of the butter and [illegible] three times in three folds [illegible] one more [illegible] in three folds.

To [illegible] the Danish pastry [illegible] melted butter [illegible] few [illegible] cut in [illegible] muffin tins well [illegible] dusted with a [illegible]. Decorations.

For Pastor [illegible] pared [illegible] dough [illegible] inch thick [illegible] roll with the [illegible] forward with your [illegible] backward with your left [illegible] into [illegible] other shapes. Place on [illegible] pan, not too close to [illegible] rise until almost double [illegible] and bake at 375. Brush [illegible] lemon flavored [illegible] syrup or diluted apricot [illegible].

Daily True Story

The Last Will

THE BOY had climbed in through an open window from a rear porch roof and was rapidly probing contents of a jewel box when the voice spoke behind him

[illegible]

The boy settled back against [illegible]

"How long have you been a burglar?" the man asked

"Not—not long. Just tonight," the boy stammered. "I haven't any job and I was hungry. I didn't know what else to do."

[illegible] them Jazz

[illegible]

"You look like an honest boy. I will trust you. I will give you a chance to earn what you have taken there and a cash reward as well.

"My wife and that man came in here an hour ago. They thought I was unconscious and they spoke as though I were gone already. It was shameful. I knew when I married her two years ago that I should have selected someone nearer my own age. I thought I could make up to her in generosity what I lacked in youth. But I was wrong.

"All along she has been unfaithful to me with that man. I learned. She sold herself to me, with his knowledge, for gold. They planned it from the first. They are impatient for my death now so they can board my yacht Aloha and sail for a cruise to Europe. I must stop them—somehow."

His voice trailed off weakly and he sank back on the pillow, closing his eyes. The boy feared [illegible] but he spoke again.

"You alone can help me," he murmured. "My will must be the instrument of my revenge. It must be changed."

[illegible] raised himself. "[illegible] my lawyer, Judge Peter [illegible] and my doctor, Wilfred [illegible]," he commanded. "Bring [illegible] here. Dr. Sloan's testimony [illegible] sanity if they try to contest. Take that key [illegible] the second drawer—that [illegible] at the side entrance. Bring them up quietly, without letting these people know.

The boy earned his reward. Judge Hawkins and Dr. Sloan, old friends of the dying man, were horrified and shocked by what he told them. But he convinced them and they acted.

They had barely witnessed the [illegible]'s signature when the door opened and a white-clad nurse entered, humming. She [illegible] and she fled.

A [illegible] haired woman rushed in a moment later, followed by a [illegible] haired man in evening clothes.

"What does this mean?" the woman cried furiously

The man on the bed chuckled.

"It means I have made a new will, my dear," he informed her. "I have left all my estate to charity, except for two special bequests to you."

"I have left you the sum of $1," he announced. "And since you and Simpson seemed to be planning so heavily on a cruise aboard her, I have left you my yacht, Aloha. Only"—he paused, smiling—"Judge Hawkins received word a few hours ago that the Aloha had sunk at her anchorage. I am afraid you and Simpson must buy your tickets to Europe or else work some other sucker."

His next will probably be Sophie Tucker. . . although Miss Tucker might not be able to accommodate, that is, if she has an NBC contract forbidding work on any Columbia affiliated station . . . Jack (WEEI) Beauvais rehearsing songs and songs and songs, getting ready for his March 19th theater booking hereabouts . . . Remember, Father Coughlin's life story in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser. . . Bear in mind also Paul Whiteman takes over this space to write your last minute radio observations on Monday.

On the Air

Stray Thought No. 1: The word "radio" is by no means new. It was in the Talmud 2000 yrs. ago and means a sound that goes 'round the world.

Frank Confession: Clyde Doerr, Music that Satisfies saxophonist, says the result of riding a horse 16 miles to take violin lessons taught him to become a master horseman.

A hitherto unknown topic is debated tonight by Reps. LaGuardia and Blanton when they verbally catch-as-catch-can on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment WAAB at 10 . . . NBC's newest favorites, the Pickens Sisters who start a daily series next wk., are said to possess the quality of the Boswell Soeurs together with the unique presentation similar to the Mills Bros.—Osxar, run out and buy a new set of tubes for the set . . . Tetrazzini, the opera star, is Bath Clubed Mon. WNAC at 8 . . . WBZ's Bill Williams interviews Mrs. Theresa Blanchard, famous figure-skating champ of the U. S. for 10 yrs., at 6:15 this eve . . . Sid Reinherz should an'nce his own piano p'grams—his voice is that good.

A N. Y.-ker named Nagle writes to Col. Stoopnagle asking the CBS gagster to drop the last part of his name because everyone is calling Mr. Nagle "Stoop" for short . . . Ah! A new game. Col. Lew Conrad Naglestoop and Bud Peters and Francis ReaDick Gordon Coughlin . . . whoa . . . this can go on forever . . . silly, isn't it?

Stray Thought No. 2: John White, NBC's Lonesome Cowboy, used to be a newspaperman, and of all the reformed reporters on the air these days White is the only one who sings—the rest talk.

S. Thought, No. 3: Prosperity isn't just around the corner, but just around the crooner.

Paul Whiteman will do a "special" on WEEI at 1 tomorrow. Paul, y'know, will leave for Moviewood when his show tour is ended . . . When a feller told Jack Beauvais he sounded exactly like R. Vallee, Jack's retort was "The only difference is a few million dollars" . . . Ranny Weeks will visit with a N. Y. agency rep. next wk. with regard to the barytone's shifting to a network in N. Y. . . Arthur Edes will be heard again soon as an'ncer at WEEI . . . WAAB starts a Witching hr. at 9:45 this eve. WBZ Witching hr., please note . . .

C. B. S has snaked a N. B. C. p'gram for itself to start on WNAC at 7:15 Mon. It's the Lanny Ross-Don Voorhees p'gram . . . More snaking, this time an idee. The Daily Tattler interviews is about to be aped by another local station.

Congregation to Disband

Because the congregation has dwindled, the Newton Universalist Society, organized in 1871, will suspend services on April 1, according to an announcement made by Arthur E. Mason, moderator.

POLITICAL NEWS

WAR ACE

Charles A. Cronin, of Lawrence, yesterday sworn in as trustee of the State Infirmary at Tewksbury, served in the French air forces during the last war. He was decorated with the senior French military brevet.

CLUB TO MEET

The newly organized Allston-Brighton Club, which hopes to include the word "Democratic" in its name within a few days (permission having been asked from the Democratic State Committee), will meet next Wednesday to start a membership campaign. The prime movers in this effort are William Flynn and J. F. Burns.

URGE TO RUN

Friends of Roswell Gleason Hall, of Dorchester, are urging him to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor's councillor from the 2nd district. The present incumbent of that position, Chester I. Campbell, of Quincy, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor.

ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

Edward Morey of 23 Mount Vernon st., Charlestown, today announced his candidacy for the Legislature in that district. "Eddie" has been active in the political life of the district for the past eight years and is one of the staunchest supporters of City Councillor Thomas H. Green.

MISSES FIRST TIME

Rep. Arthur L. Youngman of Medford, for the first time in four years' membership in the House, has missed a session. He spent the time in a dentist's chair having a refractory eye tooth removed.

STARTS CAMPAIGN

Norton C. O'Brien of West Fourth st., South Boston, has already started an active campaign for election to the legislature in Ward 7, that district. He is one of the most active members of the South Boston Al Smith Club.

TURNS TO STAGE

Why not compromise and let them dig ditches?

And while pleading with writers to go on the stage, it might be a good idea to persuade actors to retire to garrets.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

I often stop to think about national affairs and begin to worry. Do you think our statesmen are really infallible?

—Thoughtful.

Ans.—No. But Aunt Bella would say as a general rule that they are practically unfillable.

NOTE—We do not ask our readers to know anything. But we do expect our readers to be familiar with good literature. That's why we are going to a lot of trouble to print translations from other languages. Today we give you an example of Scandinavian literature. Oh, that's all right. Don't mention it.

Upward, ever upward, over the snow-covered mountains trudged Erik Erikson, whose father before him was Erik Erikson, and his grandfather before him, making it difficult for Erik Erikson to be himself. He was out gathering herbs and roots to make root beer for the wintah, which would soon close down like a small town bank. But what was this?

A girl! A girl radiant, youthful, glowing with vigor, so that the snow melted for several feet around where she stood.

"I don't believe I know you," said Erik, blushing violently.

"But I know you," said the girl, hands on hips, as she did a peasant little dance step, heel and toe. "Aren't you the big fjord dealer down at the Last Chance Gambling Hjall?"

Erik thought awhile, and then shyly answered, "Yass," but wagged his head in the negative. The girl reached out and pinched Erik's cheek shyly.

"I see you're Finnish," she said, looking deep into his eyes.

Then she turned like some lithe animal and ski-ed off into the sunrise, until she was only a speck in Erik's eye. And even yet, they say, Erik Erikson, now an old, bent man, totters around his juniper patch, hoping that the Girl, as he thinks of her, will come back. But nothing ever comes back to Erik but Winter—inexorable Winter.

Three-Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

Historians are continually telling us there is nothing unique under the sun. This is true of Passion Plays as with everything else. The celebrated spectacle at Oberammergau, Germany, is by no means the only Passion Play of its kind in the world.

For over twelve hundred years the Shiah Moslems have been holding a Passion Play at Kerbela, Iraq., to mourn the passing of Hosain, a son of Ali, the fourth caliph, and a grandson of the Prophet. The ceremonies in the town of Kerbela furnish one of he saddest and most curious sights to be found anywhere on earth.

The town itself is most unpretentious and uninviting except for its two grand mosques, but it is the cradle for a grief, a religious passion, that has endured down through the centuries.

With the Shiah, this grief transcends, it is said, every other emotion of which they are conscious. It drives them to piety and sacrifice. It lifts them above their actual selves and invests them with a tremendous feeling.

Kerbela owes its existence to the fact that Hosain was assassinated there. The most important feature of the town is Hosain's tomb. Hundreds of thousands of his followers journey there each year to take part in the great Passion Play.

This takes the form of a ceremonial procession, of 12 episodes, and is entitled "The Return of the Head." According to history, after Hosain was assassinated, his head was taken away and then brought back to Kerbela to be interred in his tomb with his body.

In the play are two great emotions expressed—grief and hate. The hate is for the descendants of the slayers of Hosain and the grief, full of bitterness and horror, is for the loss of their beloved leader, the grandson of the Prophet.

Naturally, the enormous number of tourist Moslems attracted to the Holy City of the Shiah Moslems provides a livelihood for a great portion of the permanent population. The Passion Play is not the only magnet for these people. Many of the visitors carry the bones of their dead to Kerbela to be buried.

TROOPERS KILL BIG 'WILD MAN'

Newcomb, N. Y., March 5 (INS)—In the fastness of the Adirondacks, 20 miles from here, State police killed today the "giant wild man," who has been roaming the woods for the last week, terrorizing trappers.

Clad only in deer and rabbit skins, the "wild man," was shot to death in front of his cabin by five troopers headed by Lieut. George McCann, after they had tracked him for miles.

Opinion is divided among the police and trappers as to whether he is a negro or a white man whose skin has been tanned almost black.

The dead man is about 35 years old, is over six feet tall and powerfully built.

Have You a Sea-Cow to Spare? Chicago in Need of One

Chicago, March 5 (AP)—Have you, by chance, a spare sea-cow you could part with?

Chicago's late lamented seven-foot 525-pound pet was the best attraction at the John G. Shedd Aquarium a year ago. It was the only one in captivity north of Florida.

But, after all the care it received, the sea-cow up and died of an infection from a wound inflicted during its capture.

BURGLAR FELLS GIRL STUDENT

Miss Sylvia Ramon, 20, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., a junior at Pembroke, awoke to see a man sneaking into her room in Miller Hall.

Before she could scream he put his hand over her mouth, but she struggled and he hit her with a heavy book, dazing her. When she recovered he was gone with $3.75 and a small picture.

Miss Sarah S. Morton, supervisor of the Girl Scouts' home in Benefit st., saw a man in her room and cried for help.

'L' HAD SURPLUS IN JANUARY

The first surplus over cost of service since last April was reported today by trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway in a report that covered January. It amounted to $5257.

The same month a year ago had an excess of $57,600.

For the seven months that ended in January, however, there was a deficit of $1,447,198, the report said.

Norway Premier Dies

Real Winter Cold Wave on Way to Boston

Boston faces a real winter cold wave as a result of zero temperatures in Nebraska, it was announced today by the weather bureau. The cold blast here is due tomorrow night.

A storm area near Lake Michigan is closely followed by one of the most pronounced cold waves that has occurred this winter.

Garage Blast

Fumes caused an explosion early today in the garage of W. C. Barry, Mystic ave., Medford. Windows were broken but Barry was not hurt.

P. O. SAFE AND $150 STOLEN

Henry Porter, in charge of the postoffice, was informed and immediately reported to police and postal authorities.

Flames Destroy Garage

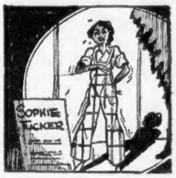
THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Odd Bits From the Envelopes!

"On an off day," suggests A. S., "why don't you compile statistics on the number of cigarettes leading Broadwayites smoke each day? People like Eddie Cantor, Flo Ziegfeld, Lee Shubert, Bert Lahr, Lou Holtz—and some of the women stars, too, of the stage and screen. How many do you smoke a day, for instance?" . . . Well, for instance, Mister Sobol smokes four packs a day and wishes he didn't . . . "Recently," writes William J. Gane from Williamsport, Pa., "your column had a line which read, 'How many of the present day performers, inquires S. Wachter, played for Billy Gain when he ran the old Manhattan Theater' . . . In the first place the name should be Gane instead of Gain and I am the same Billy Gane who ran the Manhattan Theater, where Gimbel Brothers' store now is, and it was I who played some of the acts that are now topliners. For instance, Sophie Tucker made her first appearance on Broadway for me at the old Manhattan. She was singing in a dance hall down on the Bowery, and I went down and interviewed her and signed her up. Her salary at the time was $18 a week, with eight to ten shows a day. She was frightened to death the first night—so we got a pair of overalls and blackened her up. The price of admission to the old Manhattan was ten cents and the profits ran each week for over three years from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars. John Murray (who is now in pictures), Belle Baker, James T. Morton and numerous others, now stars, played at the Manhattan."



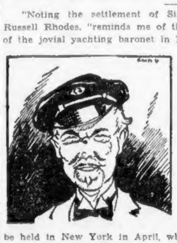
SOPHIE TUCKER

"Some weeks ago," insists A. V. Todd, "George Olsen wrote a column for your Down Memory Lane in which he stated he was the originator of the slogan, 'Olsen Moves the World.' As a matter of fact, the fellow who originated that slogan was a man named Turner who in 1901 in Denever, Col., had moving vans on which appeared this slogan 'The World Moves and Turner Moves the World.' On the roof of his warehouse appeared the slogan, too, and one day I met him on the street and told him the sign had blown down. He laughed and then told me that he had so arranged the sign that he could drop it, and ever so often he would have that done, and the next day the phone calls would begin pouring in—and letters, too. He was thus able to have a check on the number of people who read his sign, and it convinced him it was worth all the electricity it cost." . . . In fairness to George Olsen, what he stated was that his father used the slogan. He didn't say that it had originated with him . . . "How is it?" asks Wally Smith, "you've never mentioned the famous old Gus Hill's Minstrel house at 129th st. and 3th ave." . . . "Will you lend the support of your column," requests Frank Boyle, vice-president of the Private Chauffeurs' Benevolent Ass'n, "to a bill we've had introduced by Senator Lord and Assemblyman Miller in Albany, whereas on and after June 1, 1932, all chauffeurs must acquire citizenship papers before securing a chauffeur's license? Over 8300 chauffeurs in N. Y. City have signed petitions favoring this bill." . . . Texas Guinan suddenly develops a philosophic streak . . . "A son," she writes, "should inherit his father's money—not his religion; he may be too lazy to build up a new fortune, but never so slow as to catch up with a new creed. Some people think they have blue blood; others believe every pore in their body is studded with diamonds" . . . Oh, hum, Texas, stick to your night clubbing, gal!

Claude Kendall, the publisher, takes pains to advise me that Tiffany Thayer is really Tiffany Thayer—the fellow who wrote "Thirteen Men" and more recently "Thirteen Women". . . It seems Thayer, when he went into business, changed his name to Elmer Ellsworth, Jr., but when he tossed off his first novel, he used his real name and nobody believed it . . . From the Seton Hospital, Bronx, John Fonnessen writes: "You stated recently that a Russian doctor has a powder to cure tuberculosis. If his cure is still in the experimental stage I'd like to volunteer as a subject, regardless of consequences. I'm a World War veteran still battling for health and have been in any number of hospitals for the past four years. To finish this one way or the other, I'm willing to be a subject for experimentation. If it is successful, I and humanity are the gainers. If it isn't—well, Kismet!"

Bill Vallee forwards me a letter sent to Rudy from an imposter who signs himself (or herself) Louis Sobol. Enough in it to start the Vallee-Sobol feud anew . . From Edward C. Rybicki, director of the City Free Employment Agency of the Department of Public Welfare: "It is with much regret I read in your column Mr. Crowley's complaint of the agency of which I am a director. However, I wish to assure you that the incident alleged could not have happened and I am forced to the conclusion that Mrs. Crowley must have received a wrong telephone number when she thought she was connected with the City Free Employment Agency. I wish to stress this point particularly inasmuch as our office operates from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and we have hundreds of applicants here for such jobs as Mrs. Crowley had to offer.". . . "Don't be surprised," writes Gene Richards, "if within the next few months you hear that Hoover has become an out and out wetter. His wife is responsible—and believe me this comes from a reliable source" . . .

"Noting the settlement of Sir Thomas Lipton's estate," writes Russell Rhodes, "reminds me of the time when I took the testimony of the jovial yachting baronet in London in a lawsuit. The prosecutors were two American King's counselors — J. Arthur Barrett, once of New York, and the late R. Newton Crane. When Sir Thomas was sworn in he apparently did not hear the reading of the oath and when it was shouted into his cupped ear he remarked, 'If there had been any money janglin' about, I could have heerd ye all richt!' Incidentally, Addison Burbank, the magazine illustrator, together with Garett Price, James Montgomery Flagg, Covarrubias and other well-known illustrators and caricaturists, will stage a unique exhibition of the work of American magazine illustrators, to be held in New York in April, when each artist will show play-time and working-time sketches". . . Alf T. Wilton grows reminiscent—"I booked James Thornton for many years. There was the time when the late William McCart brought Jim to Worcester, Mass., where I was interested in theaters. He planted Thornton at the Waldo House, where all professionals stopped in those days, with word that he was to have three drinks during the evening. No sooner had he left when Thornton touched the bell and upon the arrival of the boy ordered a whiskey. Five minutes later he ordered three more. When he drank the three, the clerk advised him he could have no more. He went down, came over to the Lothrop Opera House and interrupted McCart, who was in the midst of a comedy scene. 'Bill,' he said, 'Can I have another drink at the hotel?' McCart stopped his act and while the audience howled, answered, 'Sure you can, Jim.'"



BOYS OFFERED CHANCE TO WIN PLANE TRIP

Red-blooded boys of New England!

What is your fondest dream?

How about an airplane trip to Detroit, free of charge, to attend the National Aircraft Exposition?

TEST IS SIMPLE

The rules, which should be read carefully and followed closely, are published in another column.

There will be 24 questions to answer, directly and briefly. Two are published today. Two more will be published each day until the contest ends.

Just one boy will be selected from all the readers of the Boston Evening American.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

He will go by plane to the National Aircraft Exposition at Detroit, April 2 to 10. He will be taken on a 60-mile special air flight around the city. He will be taken on a sight-seeing tour of Detroit and he will be taken on a tour of the Ford automobile plant.

Look for today's questions.

Read the rules.

Watch for Monday's questions.

MOTHER URGES BOY RETURN

The Boston Evening American has been asked to assist in locating John Henry Lee, 17, who has been missing from his Newton home since September of 1930.

John H. Lee

His mother, Mrs. Mabel Lee, of 194 Auburn st., Auburndale, is sure he will return if he knows she has been appointed his legal guardian.

Young Lee who has a fondness for aviation, was last reported in Janesville, Ohio. He weighs 135 pounds, is 5 feet 9 inches in height, has light brown hair and prominent teeth.

ARMY FLIERS TO MEET

The Air Reserve Assn. of the First Corps Area will meet Monday evening at 6:30 at the France restaurant, Huntington ave.

Capt. Glenn Salisbury

Arrangements have been made by Capt. Glenn Salisbury in charge of the U. S. Army Airport here for a discussion by Capt. Joseph L. Stromme, U. S. Army, on industrial mobilization. Capt. Stromme was formerly in charge of the reserve officers' activities for several years.

The Air Reserve Assn. of this area has trebled its membership since its consolidation with the New England Reserve Assn. and its alliance with the National Air Reserve Assn. of the different corps areas.

Maj. Neil J. Cronin has been elected president of the larger organization and Lieut. Morris Cornell and Lieut. Bernard C. Rose, the corps area representatives. These officers will attend the national conference scheduled for May, 1932, at Chicago, Ill.

LAST CALL FOR FILM CONTEST

If you haven't identified the last three pictures printed in The Boston Evening American, procure them immediately and send in your answers.

For those who have missed the previous issues we repeat: All that is necessary to win a prize is to identify the four photos. Give the title of the production and name the players shown in the photo. All of the scenes are taken from pictures in which Marion Davies has starred since talking pictures came in vogue.

All answers should be sent to Identification Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., It is important that your answers be correct but neatness will also count. Don't wait, send yours in now.

Prizes are as follows: First prize, $10; second and third prizes, $5; fourth and fifth prizes, $2.50, and 25 prizes of guest tickets to see Marion Davies and Clark Gable in "Polly of the Circus."

What, No Knot-Holes How'll They See Fair

Chicago, March 5 (AP)—What, no knot-holes?

The answer is "No." There will be no knot-holes through which to peek at the 1933 World's Fair. A metal fence, nine feet high and three and one-half miles long, is the reason.
